Congress and AAP adopt double standard on strike of electricity employees : Arun Sood

SACHIN MOUDGILL CHANDIGARH, FEB 22

Bharatiya Janata Party Chandigarh State President Arun Sood has accused the Congress and Aam Aadmi Party of adopting double standards in relation to the strike by the employees of the Electricity Department on the matter of power privatization.

They say that Congress and Aam Aadmi Party are opposing power privatization in Chandigarh and pretending to support the striking employees, whereas the truth is that Congress ruled Mumbai has privatized electricity and Aam Aadmi Party ruled Delhi.

Electricity has also been privatized in the state. Not only this, electricity has been privatized in many other big cities. Privatization of essential services is the need of the hour to provide better facilities to the people. Arun Sood says that Congress and Aam Aadmi Party are trying to trouble the people of Chandigarh by supporting the breakdown of electricity supply for 72 hours. In today's era, when the country is going through an epidemic, many emergency services are needed which cannot be completed without electricity. If a patient needs a ventilator or oxygen concentrator, what will happen to them? Similarly, the breakdown of children's examinations will affect their studies as well. There are many senior citizens living in Chandigarh, in the dark, any untoward incident can happen to them too. There will be an impact in the business and industrial sector, this strike will affect the social and economic system of the city. On the contrary Congress and Aam Aadmi Party are only playing dirty politics. Electricity employees are being misled by saying that the employees will lose their jobs and they will not get the benefit of pension whereas Chandigarh Administration has already mentioned in the contract that these 650 employees will not lose their jobs till retirement and will not get pension even after retirement.Congress and Aam Aadmi Party are trying to tarnish the image of BJP, harassing the residents of Chandigarh by provoking these employees to not restore the power supply for the next 72 hours.

When the Chandigarh Administration has already fulfilled the demands of 650 employees, then why 12 lakh people of Chandigarh have to bear the brunt due to the poor politics of Congress and Aam Aadmi Party. Arun Sood has assured that he is taking up the entire matter with the administration so that the general public does not suffer. He hoped that the regular power supply would be restored soon and the problems being faced by the people would be resolved soon.

Illegal mining resumed day after the election

VICKY BHABAT ZIRAKPUR, FEB 22

The day after the February 20 Assembly elections in Punjab, the illegal miners again camped in the Ghaggar river and restored the temporary bridge demolished by SDM Dera Bassi Swati Tiwana.

The morale of the illegal miners is so high that they did all these things in broad daylight but no official or employee of the administration came to stop their work. From all this one can gauge how fearless the mining mafia is and how much access they have to the system. Illegal mining has been a major issue in Dera Bassi constituency ahead of the elections and constituency. MLA NK Sharma blames Congress candidate Deepinder Singh Dhillon and Aam Aadmi Party candidate Kuljit Singh Randhawa for illigal mining. Although the government had ordered only three feet of soil to be removed from the fields, the mining mafia is digging a hole in the ground and digging it 25 to 30 feet deep, which is polluting the ground water and causing cancer in the area of Dera Bassi. The mining mafia has unloaded large quantities of crops in the Ghaggar river on the eve of the elections and is hauling sand, gravel and mud in trucks and allegedly warming the pockets of the officials. Prior to the elec-tion, SDM Dera Bassi Swati Tiwana had taken action to stop illegal mining and also demolished the temporary bridge built by the miners. But now the temporary bridge has been rebuilt and mining has started.

Sidhu, Kejriwal fooling people of Punjab, Electoral defeat will teach them a bitter lesson: Chugh ASHOK KAURA

PHAGWARA: BJP national general secretary Tarun Chugh today lashed out at Punjab PCC president Navjot Sidhu and AAP national convener Arvind Kejriwal for cheating the people of Punjab with false promises. In a statement, Chugh lambasted Sidhu for talking about sand and liquor mafias in Punjab saying that what did he do to check the mafias during the last five years when he was a minister and was also a father figure of the Congress being the state president Sidhu was a mute witness to the sand mafia that Channi led as the chief minister. Sidhu remained blind to the mafias that flourished in the state during the Congress rule when he enjoyed power to the full. Sidhu is now fooling the people of the state when his party and he himself is facing defeat in the elections. Chugh came down heavily on Kejriwal for being handin-glove with liquor mafias whom he has given as free hand in Delhi as a chief minister Kejriwal has exposed his links with the liquor mafia whom he is now plotting to bring to Punjab.

Bad condition of traffic system in Jandiala city, illegal occupation of markets on roads

KULJEET SINGH JANDIALA GURU, FEB 22

Traffic system is bad in Jandiala Guru city. Due to this, there is traffic jam from Ghas Mandi to Sarai Road, Ghas Mandi to Vegetable Market, Shaikhfatta Gate area, often from 10 am to 7 pm. The reason for this is that The auto driver has no stand and stops the auto on the road to pick up the ride near Ghas Mandi Chowk, Valmiki Chowk, and Jain School. Similarly, there is no proper stand of street vendors on Ghas Mandi Road. Standing on both sides, when a driver stops the car to buy fruits there, then the jam starts.

In the same market, shopkeepers keep the same from 8 to 10 feet in front of the shops, due to which the passing space for the passers-by of the market gets shrunk and jammed. There is a ban, but big vehicles pass through here all day and there is unloading of trucks during the day near Ghas Mandi Chowk and outside Shaikhfatta Darwaza, which is the main reason for the jam. People say that due to this problem The city council and the police administration should work together for a permanent solution, so that people can get rid of the traffic problem.

Time is Money

 \mathbf{T} e live under Fast Capitalism, which is profoundly transforming our sense of waiting. A 24x7 consumer economy and click-andorder services mean that we need our goods, food, cabs, and services in or before time. We are entitled to become impatient and angry because we have paid for this time.

Think of the opposite of Fast Capitalism. It is not slow capitalism it is public/government-run services, such as hospitals, banks, and certificate-issuing authorities. They shape our sense of patience and waiting due to their sluggish nature of services and delivery. Private service providers recognize that queuing up often results in customer dissatisfaction. Delays, long waiting periods, and how we are treated during the waiting period are key areas of intervention that Fast Capitalism analyses and works on. It uses our patience to make profits and, in turn, transforms the self deeply and, perhaps, irreversibly. The minute management of waiting is where the profits of consumer culture and capitalism lie.

But capitalism also needs a slow, poor quality and, sometimes, defunct but running public sector. This need for the Other gives it legitimacy and a superior moral ground to strengthen its hold. Unsurprisingly, there is much support among people for the privatization of public institutions such as schools, railways, hospitals and, now, even airports and airlines. Given the choice between a cost-effective public service and a privatized, quicker service with higher cost, the rich and the middle-class would go for the latter without thinking about the exclusion of the poor in the process. They would prefer a space which is less crowded and has a coffee machine and an air-condi-tioner. While accepting privatized services as a golden norm, they internalize the public sector as slow and inefficient. To demand for its reform is a never-ending wait

The gap between the poor and the rich is not just about haves and have-nots; it is also about who will/should wait or not wait. Time is money and status. How you spend your time shapes your class, caste, and gendered self.

The theft and management of time was and is at the heart of capitalist profit. In the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, factory owners stole time from workers leisure hours by reducing lunchtimes, letting machines run partially during breaks, asking employees to work on weekends and mismanaging factory clocks. This stolen time amounted to significant profit for employers.

New catalogue of stars reveals chemical history of Milky Way

The Milky Way Galaxy has an end number of mysteries in it that still need to be deciphered by scientists and astronomers. Now, University of Notre Dame researchers, along with collaborators in China and Australia, published a new sample catalogue of more than 24 million stars that can be used to decipher the chemical history of elements in the Milky Way Galaxy.

The research, published in 'The Astro-physical Journal', represented about onehundredth of a per cent of the roughly 240 billion stars in the Milky Way. It marked a milestone for Timothy Beers, the Grace-Rupley Professor of Physics at Notre Dame, who spent most of his career planning and executing everlarger surveys of stars to decipher the galaxy's formation and chemical evolution -- a field called galactic archaeology. Researchers employed a new approach to measure the light from each star to infer the abundance of heavy metals such as iron. They also measured their distances, motions and ages.

"The elemental abundances of individual stars trace the chemical enrichment of the Milky Way galaxy, from when it first began to form stars shortly after the Big Bang to the present," Beers said.

Combining this information with the stellar distances and motions allows us to constrain the origin of different components in the galaxy, such as the halo and disk populations," he continued. "Adding age estimates puts a 'clock' on the process, so that a much more complete picture of the entire process can be drawn."

Previous spectroscopic work by Beers and collaborators provided the information for the tens of thousands of stars that were used to calibrate the new approach, based on precision photometric measurements. The recent research used large photometric samples obtained with the Australian SkyMapper Southern Survey and the European Gaia satellite mission to calibrate estimates of metallicity.

Until recently, the only means to obtain accurate estimates of the content of heavy metals, such as iron, for large numbers of stars was by taking low- and medium-resolution spectra that could be analyzed to extract this information. The process was long and painstaking.

Beers is most interested in the stars with the lowest metallic ties -- very metalpoor stars with iron abundances less than 1 per cent that of the sun -- because they were born early in the history of the universe, and therefore reveal the origin of elements in the periodic table. In the early 1980s, when Beers started his work, researchers knew of only about 20 very metal-poor stars. This new catalogue brought the total of what Beers refers to as "fossils of the night sky" to more than 500,000.

Containing more than 19 million dwarf and five million giant stars, the new catalogue is expected to advance the knowledge of how the Milky Way was formed in a variety of ways, Beers said. These include characterizing the structure of the galactic thin/thick disks -- the structural components of spiral galaxies -- as well as the population of stars and globular clusters that surround most disk galaxies, called the stellar halo.

The catalogue of stars will also help researchers identify the trails of stars left behind from disrupted dwarf galaxies and globular clusters.

Trudeau noted there were some truckers just outside Ottawa who might be planning further blockades or occupations. Though hailing the end of restrictions, Johnson and other UK officials clarified that the pandemic is not yet over.

The trucker protest grew until it closed a handful of Canada-U.S. border posts and shut down key parts of the capital for more than three weeks. But all border blockades have now ended and the streets around the Canadian Parliament are quiet. Ottawa protesters who vowed never to give up are largely gone, chased away by Singh said they know there are protesters waiting in the surrounding areas of Ottawa and in the capital itself. They need to be cleared out, said Singh, who also noted there have been convoys that have been intercepted.

The lifestyle changes due to COVID-19 have increased the risks of stroke. Putting an end to these 5 unhealthy behaviors can improve the quality of your life and lower the risk of stroke

Unhealthy Meals & Stroke Choosing nutritious food is important as it can reduce the chances of stroke by 80%. A balanced diet with the right proportion of fiber, calories, proteins, minerals, vitamins, and alternative nutrients reduces the risk of stroke and other cardiovascular diseases in high-risk patients. Limiting the intake of sodium, salt, saturated fat, and sugar helps regulate blood pressure levels, cholesterol levels, and blood sugar levels. Patients at risk of stroke should restrict eating meat and avoid egg yolk. Lazy Life & Stroke

Being physically inactive and spending leisure time doing sedentary activities has become common in the younger generation. A lazy lifestyle increases body fat: reduces muscles strength; affects bone density; metabolism, and deprives the overall immune system of the body. Therefore, an inactive lifestyle increases the risks of health issues

Tobacco contains 7000 toxic chemicals impacting the lungs, damaging body cells, and increasing the threat of stroke. Smoke from cigarettes alters cholesterol levels which cause heart disease & stroke. You might not smoke, but passive smoking (inhaling else's' smoke) is also hazardous. Quitting smoking improves oxygen level, tasting and smelling ability, improves circulation and lung function. These effects are noticeable and reduce the chances of stroke and related diseases

Drinking Habits & Stroke Drinking patterns varies in every individual, but excessive alcohol has guite an impact on health. And it is associated with increased incidents of stroke. Excessive alcohol contributes to high blood pressure levels (hypertension) and certainly gives rise to heart problems like atrial fibrillation, cardiomyopathy, and stroke. Limiting your consumption of alcohol reduces hypertension and cholesterol fluctuations, which are directly responsible for the stroke. Negligence & Stroke

Any life-threatening disease is the result of an imbalance either in blood pressure levels, cholesterol, or blood sugar level. These risk factors increase with age and attack the vulnerable group, and as soon as you neglect these three elements, they disrupt the harmony of the body Make sure you check your BP, sugar regularly and control your cholesterol level to minimize the chances of stroke Dr. Khusbu Goel, Consultant Neurologist.

ITC Engage introduces the unique udhiana : Recently, doctors at Fortis Hospital Gurugram gave a new lease of life to a 63-year-old businessman by performing Subcutaneous Implantable Cardioverter Defibrillator (S-ICD) implant. The patient came to the hospita vith a complaint of uneasiness and with severe chest pain. Upon investigation, he was diagnosed with irregular heartbeats and reduced heart functioning that increases the chances of Sudden Cardiac Arrest (SCA). The unconventional therapy was recommended in this case instead of conventional ICD therapy because the patient was suffering from other comorbidities like obesity and diabetes, putting him at a higher risk of SCA. A defibrillator is placed just below the skin and is performed without disturbing the blood vessels as a diabetic patient is more prone to infections. S-ICD implant protects the patient from SCA without touching the heart chambers. Like transvenous ICDs, the S-ICD System utilizes a pulse generator capable of delivering life-saving therapy. Unlike transvenous ICDs, the S-ICD System uses a subcutaneous electrode and analyses the heart rhythm, like an ECG test, to effectively sense, discriminate, and converts life-threatening rhythms to a normal rhythm. The S-ICD implant is significant for young patients whose life expectancy is longer. Dr. T.S Kler, Chairman, Fortis Heart and Vascular Institute at Fortis Memorial Research Institute, Gurugram & Fortis Hospital, Vasant Kunj, New Delhi said "The new therapies like S-ICD are showing great results for patients with heart ailments. In this case, the patient was also diabetic which made him more prone to infections, otherwise, conventional therapy like ICD would have been suggested. Since S-ICD is placed outside the heart with no wires in contact it reduces the risk of infections, and the patient is protected from lethal heart conditions like SCA
