EDITORIAL

Complicated legacy

It is 173 years since the publication of the first critical edition of the Rig Veda Sanhita, an immense scholarly accomplishment, more so because in presenting the only known complete commentary by Sayana?acarya, it remains one of the few Western Vedic studies to engage seriously with the indigenous interpretive tradition. For Max Müller, the editor, publishing it had proved difficult: only through the funding of the Court of Directors of the East India Company could the work see the light of day. In contrast to the Company's objective, which was to understand its colonial subjects better, Müller's was to give Indians access to their own heritage and identity.

On the one hand, his comparative method was certainly driven by empathy for ancient India—though this feeling did not extend to a support for Indian decolonisation. On the other, Müller's idea that Hindu mythology, indeed mythology in general, epitomised a process of decay, an obfuscation of a primordial monotheistic religion centred on the Sun, which had arisen through his study of language in the ?gveda, seems less motivated by fellow feeling and more so, one may venture to suggest, by his Christianity.

Müller's study of ?g Vedic Sanskrit, especially his ideas on personification in that work, had led him to the important linguistic conclusion that all language was figurative. Ancient humans attribute linguistic gender and other personifying elements to make abstract concepts and natural phenomena concrete, a tendency evinced in the hymns of the ?gveda, one of the earliest examples of human literature in which the gods primarily personify natural events and elements, such as thunder, dawn, fire and rain. Müller argued that over time the original meanings of words were forgotten so that greater mythologising eventually led to concepts that had deviated from their original intentions. Beginning with the addition of gender to nouns, the creation of more elaborate narratives of personification epitomised to him a long-term process of language degeneration.

From this position, Müller made a deeply problematic second step in his reasoning. If all language is eventually falsifying, then Hindu mythologies are useless, indeed 'ridiculous', and Hindu polytheism itself, playing out in a panoply of myths, was a corruption of the original monotheistic religion, which ancient Hindus were trying to put to words. Müller reduced the various ways myths can be appreciated to a single interpretation.

Bring hepatitis care closer to people

The World Health Organization on Thursday called for making quality hepatitis care affordable, accessible, and integrated into primary health care, to bring these lifesaving services closer to people and accelerate efforts to eliminate viral hepatitis in the WHO South-East Asia Region by 2030.

"Viral hepatitis is preventable and treatable. Yet, an estimated 60 million people live with chronic hepatitis B and about 10.5 million with chronic hepatitis C in our Region. Our efforts to eliminate viral hepatitis can only succeed if we ensure everyone everywhere has access to hepatitis services," said Dr Poonam Khetrapal Singh, Regional Director, WHO South-East Asia Region, while addressing a virtual event to mark World Hepatitis Day.

A strong advocate for the elimination of viral hepatitis and a hepatitis survivor, cine star Amitabh Bachchan, said in a video message, "For a person living with hepatitis, every day is hepatitis day. I can feel the pain of a sufferer, the pain of my near and dear ones seeing me suffer. We need to ask. What will it take to prevent more people from losing their lives, and their health to hepatitis? We need to bring care closer to communities."

Hepatitis kills more people than HIV and malaria - nearly one person every 30 seconds, globally.

"We are calling on countries to integrate quality, accessible and affordable hepatitis care into primary health care services, in line with the Region's new Strategy for Primary Health Care, as well as new WHO Global Health Sector Strategies on HIV, viral hepatitis and sexually transmitted infections (STIs)," the Regional Director said. A new Regional Action Plan on viral hepatitis, HIV and STIs, is being launched in September with the aim to increase quality and efficiency, and leverage the full power of primary health care, universal health coverage and health systems. It will promote equity and innovation, and advance people-centred and community-driven approaches.

The Regional Director said, to bring hepatitis care closer to communities, and to eliminate hepatitis as a public health threat, several priorities must be addressed. Political commitment to eliminating hepatitis must be strengthened and investment into high-quality, people-centred hepatitis care must be increased.

"Access for all to safe and effective vaccines and drugs, and point-of-care diagnostics, must be improved, with a focus on increasing affordability," she said.

Communication and community engagement strategies must be strengthened to reduce stigma and increase awareness and testing, especially among populations at higher risk.

"Importantly, we must explore service delivery models that are close to where people live and work, and which are aligned with people's needs, preferences and health-seeking behaviours.

We need to shift from the specialist domain, and into communities," the Regional Director emphasized.

Viral hepatitis can be prevented. Vaccination, especially Hepatitis B birth dose followed by other doses in childhood vaccination schedule; safe injection; safe blood transfusion and safe dental procedures are among key preventive measures. Equally important is timely detection to ensure treatment, as only 10 per cent of people with hepatitis are aware of their status.

Bachchan, in his video message on World Hepatitis Day, reiterated, "We must collectively resolve, communicate and act. Action to eliminate viral hepatitis cannot and must not wait." The virtual webinar organized by WHO South-East Asia Regional Office was attended by national programme managers from Member countries, experts, partners and representatives of organizations working at the community level.

Eating more ultra-processed foods is associated with risk of dementia

The risk of acquiring dementia may be higher in people who consume the most ultra-processed foods, such as soft drinks, chips, and cookies, than in those who consume the least of these items.

Unprocessed or minimally processed foods were found to be related with a lower risk when ultra-processed foods were substituted in a person's diet, according to researchers. The research did not establish a causal link between ultra-processed meals and dementia. Only an association is shown.

The findings of the new study were published in the online issue of Neurology®, the medical journal of the American Academy of Neurology.

Ultra-processed foods are high in added sugar, fat and salt, and low in protein and fiber. They include soft drinks, salty and sugary snacks, ice cream, sausage, deep-fried chicken, yogurt, canned baked beans and tomatoes, ketchup, mayonnaise, packaged guacamole and hummus, packaged breads and flavored cereals.

"Ultra-processed foods are meant to be convenient and tasty, but they diminish the quality of a person's diet," said study author Huiping Li, PhD, of Tianjin Medical University in China. "These foods may also contain food additives or molecules from packaging or produced during heating, all of which have been shown in other studies to have negative effects on thinking and memory skills. Our research not only found that ultra-processed foods are associated with an increased risk of dementia, it found replacing them with healthy options may decrease dementia risk."

For the study, researchers identified 72,083 people from the UK Biobank, a large database containing the health information of half a million people living in the United Kingdom. Participants were age 55 and older and did not have dementia at the start of the study. They were followed for an average of 10 years. By the end of the study, 518 people were diagnosed with dementia.

Heavy rains claim over 111 lives, damage over 6,000 houses in Balochistan

The recent spell of monsoon rains, which started on June 1 has claimed as many as 111 lives in Balochistan, the Chief Secretary of the country, Abdul Azai Aqili revealed on Thursday.

Addressing a press conference, Aqili said that heavy downpour in the province completely tore down 6,077 houses and partially damaged more than 10,000 homes -- and these are just the official statistics, the News International reported.

He further said that 16 dams sustained minor or major damages during the rains, while crops and gardens stretching over two acres of land were also harmed.

"The recent monsoon spell brought more than 500 per cent as compared to earlier rain and also severely damaged 2,400 solar panels," the chief secretary said.

He said that at least 10 districts in Balochistan were affected due to the rain and around 650 km of roads were damaged in the rains. Rainwater has accumulated on the main roads and streets and has caused a disruption in the flow of traffic, and the accumulated water has caused several vehicles and motorcycles to break down on the streets. The downpour across the province has caused several houses and villages to be submerged, standing crops and infrastructure was damaged and many remote areas were cut off from the rest of the population due to destroyed roads, the News International reported. "The route from Karachi to Quetta has been closed for heavy traffic," he said, urging people to refrain from unnecessary travels, as it was in their best interest. A National Highway Authority official mentioned that the Hub Bridge was built in 1962 and after the heavy rains filled the dam, it overflowed and in turn, damaged the bridge. He said that new bridges will be constructed on an "emergency basis" in Hub. The chief secretary said that the Pakistan Army, Frontier Constabulary, and civil administration were conducting rescue operations, but damaged roads are hampering the efforts. Rescue and relief activities are in full swing in the province, according to the PDMA, adding that camps, ration bags, blankets, and other everyday life necessary stuff have been dispatched to the flood-hit areas. The top official added that the leaves of all government employees have been cancelled in the wake of the disastrous rains, the News International reported. But Balochistan's plight might not end there as the Pakistan Meteorological Department (PMD) has forecast more rains in various districts of the province, advising all concerned authorities to remain alert and take necessary precautionary measures during the forecast period.

Who Is This

I came out alone on my way to my tryst. But who is this that follows me in the silent dark? I move aside to avoid his presence but I escape him not. He makes the dust rise from the earth with his swagger; he adds his loud voice to every word that I utter. He is my own little self, my lord, he knows no shame; but I am ashamed to come to thy door in his company.

My police encounter

BIRINDER SINGH

Our life is full of events and incidents which occur in our day to day life. These are like scents the aroma of which we always feel around us. These remain embedded forever in our memory and influence our thoughts and actions. Looking back, the mindscape gets confronted with such events which sometimes make us laugh, sometimes make us feel bad or sad and sometimes make us feel satisfied or wanting in life.

Now at the afternoon of my life, these have started catching up with me. I jot down every memory that comes to me. One memory leads to another. The recent killing of the singer Musse Wala in broad day light has put a question mark on the efficacy of our police force for its failure to check carrying of high tech weapons openly by the criminals. This reminds me of an incident which occurred during days of terrorism in the State. It is about my strange encounter with police the flash back of which always sends me into peals of laughter.

It was 1990. I was suddenly transferred out of city beautiful and posted at Patti near Indo-Pak border. It was perilous time in the region. Terrorism was at its peak in the State especially at this place of posting.

The terrorist groups in the state had unleashed a reign of terror against minority community, police and govt. officers including judges who did not heed their warnings. They were advancing death threats to those who did not obey their commands. To work in such an atmosphere was extremely difficult. I was provided with security of 2+5 being vulnerable to terrorist attacks. I was also given some tips to follow in order to keep myself as safe as possible. One was fairly straight forward,

"always keep yourself locked and not open the door if I was not expecting anybody even if the house was fully guarded."

Two was "always take a different route while driving to my home place." The third bit of advice was scariest; "if I was in the open, taking a walk for instance and I hear gun shots, I should start running in a zig zag manner." I had also got issued a .9 Bore pistol from police malkhana which I always kept hooked on my belt while traveling. Though provided with sufficient number of security guards, I rarely carried them along because I was aware of the fact that the terrorists would not be interested in killing me but they would have their eyes on sophisticated weapons of accompanying security guards and if I come in their way, they would not hesitate to gun me down.

The police and security forces were on high alert to keep vigil on any suspected movement to foil the designs of terrorists. BSF, CRPF troops along with local police used to be deployed at various check posts as a beefed up security measure.

They used to stop vehicles randomly to carry out searches. On one hot summer evening, I was getting back from Amritsar after attending monthly meeting. At a police naka I was signaled to stop by an officer of the check post. With trepidation in my heart, I asked him, "yes, for what". The uniformed force gheraoed my car and asked me to get down. Without disclosing my identity, I got down in an obliging manner. I stood by the side of the car while the police jawans were conducting search of my vehicle. They were searching for any incriminating article including the arms. I was watching all this with interest as well as with an apprehension that they would certainly question me about the weapon hanging on my belt with my white shirt tucked in.

And then I will have to disclose my identity or show the documents for the same.

But nothing of that sort happened. After search they allowed me to go. Surprisingly they did not ask me about the heavy weapon hanging wide open on my person to the clear sight of everyone. Till date I do not know why. Mystified, I trod back home. Of-course, smilingly. Still they reign supreme.

Here are some of the tried and tested home remedies for throat ulcer

A sharp ache in your throat when trying to swallow does not have to be a side effect of a cold. It might also be a bacterial or fungal infection, an injury or sickness, or a hole in the mucous membrane that results in a throat ulcer. They can also be associated with acid reflux and gastrointestinal disorders, and they usually continue for 4-5 days, accompanied by acute discomfort, a shooting earache, and red and swollen sores that make eating and speaking difficult. Medical professionals recommended that any non-healing or recurring ulcers lasting longer than 2-10 weeks be investigated.

Causes
"Throat ulcers are caused by a variety of factors", says Dr. Aditya S Chowti, Senior Consultant - Internal Medicine, Fortis Hospital, Cunningham Road, Bangalore who details the causes for throat ulcers. The impaired immune system, especially if it is weakened due to herpes (the herpes virus may infect the lining of both the mouth and throat)
Acidic foods such as pineapple, tomato, pepper, etc. Acid reflux and other stomach issues
B-complex vitamin shortage, folic acid deficit, or mineral deficiency, such as iron deficiency
Symptoms
Throat ulcers may be accompanied by additional symptoms, the severity of which will vary. Common symptoms include bad breath, coughing, difficulty breathing, pus, sore throat, and difficulty speaking. Occasionally, throat pain is a sign of a life-threatening ailment that requires quick medical attention. Keep an eye out for warning signals such as choking, confusion, memory loss, high temperature, and shortness of breath, all of which require rapid hospitalisation.
Home Remedies
Even if your sore throat is not severe enough to set a panic alarm, it is nevertheless irritating and may prevent you from sleeping well. Fortunately, you can relieve pain and irritation using at-home remedies.

Honey
A common household cure for a sore throat; can be blended

in tea or consumed on its own. Studies prove honey to be even more helpful than cough suppressants at taming overnight coughs while also being an efficient wound healer.

Saltwater
Gargling with warm salt water might help break down secretions, aid in killing microorganisms, and relieve a sore throat. Using a half-teaspoon of salt in a full glass of warm water, make a saltwater solution to minimize swelling and keep the throat clean. Repeat every three hours.
Chamomile Tea
Chamomile tea has a calming effect, with its anti-inflammatory, antioxidant, and astringent effects making it popular. It has been used for therapeutic purposes like easing a sore throat, for a long time. Inhaling chamomile steam has also been demonstrated in studies to help reduce cold symptoms, including a sore throat, and help the body fight off the virus by stimulating your immune system.
Baking Soda

Gargling with baking soda combined with salt water can also help soothe a sore throat as it kills bacteria and stops yeast and fungi from growing.

The environment at home obviously played a con-

"I took formal coaching from my mother till 9th grade and then started training under the supervision of my coach Amarjit Singh.

There was stiff competition and I knew this had to be my best effort to succeed in reaching this platform, added Vedansh. The trials were conducted in 5 zones spread across Kolkata, Bombay, Ludhiana, Chennai and Delhi.

DARSHAN SHARMA
NILOKHERI: Senior Congress leader Inderjit Singh Goraya said that Sonia Gandhi is not only the country's oldest and the national president of the party fighting for the country's independence, but she is an example for the country's politicians who have always done decent and value-based politics. He has set an example for the country's politics by renouncing the post of Prime Minister. Inderjit Goraya said that indecency with Sonia Gandhi is not tolerable. He said that seeing herself surrounded by allegations of corruption yesterday, Union Minister Smriti Irani tried to make unnecessary issues of words, wrong pronunciation of words, by stopping the debate on important issues like inflation, corruption, unemployment before the Parliament! He instigated and instigated BJP MPs against Sonia Gandhi for causing mental and physical hurt to the Congress President, which is condemnable. Goraya said that today the people of the country are seeing and understanding everything and when time comes, the people will give a befitting reply to the BJP. But still, by making this minor mistake an issue, Union Minister Smriti Irani raised it unnecessarily in the Lok Sabha and tried to humiliate the National President of Congress by targeting it. He demanded that the allegations of corruption against Smriti Irani should be investigated fairly and being the leader of the house, Prime Minister Narendra Modi himself should apologise for the indecent behavior against Sonia Gandhi in Parliament. He said that the Prime Minister should do the work of warning the MPs of his party so that such provocative behavior does not happen in future.

Modi govt misusing agencies to suppress oppn's voice: Balla

SHIV KUMAR SHARMA
KARNAL: Rajindra Balla, a member of the Haryana Pradesh Congress Committee and former member of the Haryana Police Recruitment Board, today said that the Modi government wants to scare All India Congress Committee President Sonia Gandhi and Congress Party's former president Rahul Gandhi through ED. It is illegal and the Modi government wants to suppress the voice of its political opponents by harassing them through government investigation agencies, which is not only wrong but also undemocratic. Balla said that all the leaders and workers of the Congress party are trying to save the democracy. But the way the constitution is being flouted, this has never happened before during the time of any government but the Congress is not going to be suppressed. Rahul Gandhi always raises the right issues. There is chaos all over the country and the state is becoming a Banana Republic without any rule of law. The police and the elected representatives are not safe. Fear of ED is being shown by the Government. Rajendra Balla said that in order to win the 2024 elections, the Modi government is trying to create an atmosphere of fear among the people, by scaring the opposition, especially by tarnishing the image of the big Congress leaders. To divert the mind of people from issues of inflation, unemployment, law and order, the falling economic system and the falling price of rupees, such issues are being raised against Sonia-Rahul and other leaders, he alleged.
