Tears came when I saw small children spreading their hands for bread - ADGP Jadhav

SHIV KUMAR SHARMA GURUGRAM, OCT 5: Roti, clothes and house are the three basic necessities of life and in this too, first of all a person needs bread. In the absence of bread, he can even commit any crime to satisfy the hunger of his stomach. Once I went to a slum with 40 packets of food and there it was very less. Small children were saying by hitting on the glass of my car, give me something to eat. Seeing this scene brought tears to my eyes and since then I have decided that if even a little bit of this work is done, then some people can get food. These words were said by

Additional Director General of Police Shrikant Jadhav, Senior Police Officer of Haryana Police. Today, on completion of 300 days of Gurugram Roti Bank branch, he was mainly at the place of food distribution by Roti Bank branch Gurugram. He had this dream 5 years ago that no person should go hungry in Haryana. To make this dream come true, he first established SCRB Madhuban, Police Line Kurukshetra, Police Chowki Sector 16 Faridabad and Haryana Police Roti Bank in Gurugram on 5th December 2021 which has been running smoothly since then. Roti Bank Hai branch will also be opened in Ambala in near future. ADGP Shrikant Jadhav heads the Haryana State Narcotics Control Bureau and also serves as the Additional Director General of Police, Ambala Division. He was accompanied by Narcotic Control Bureau Superintendent of Police Tahir Hussain, Deputy Superintendent of Police Anil Kumar.

VIRENDRAJANGRA TARAORI, OCTOBER 5: Karnal Commissioner Sanjeev Verma visited the Taraori Anaj Mandi on Wednesday, took stock of the paddy procurement arrangements and interacted with the farmers to get information about their problems. Meanwhile, he asked the procurement agencies to speed up the procurement and asked the market committee officials to ensure that the farmers do not face any problem in selling the paddy. He reached Anaj Mandi at 10:40

this morning and instead of going to the Market Committee office, he directly reached Kisan Ki Dheri. He asked the farmers present there about any problem. A farmer, Ishpal Singh, said that his crop is weighed on digital forks because he could not get accurate information about the weight on other forks. On this, Market Committee Secretary Mohit Beri said that four types of forks should be installed inside each shed and the paddy should be weighed on the fork on which the facility is available.

The crime graph in the country can be reduced only by changing the mindset- Munish Gupta

TARAORI : VIRENDRA JANGRA: Munish Gupta, a social worker and industrialist from Taraowadi, said that every festival of Hinduism definitely gives us a message to walk on the path of goodness, like the Dussehra festival. He said that the Dussehra festival gives us the message of the victory of good over evil and also warns us of the result of a person who walks on the path of evil. He said that on this day, Ravana is burnt as a symbol of evil in the whole country because he had kidnapped Sita, the wife of Lord Rama, but due to his knowledge of the scriptures, Mother Sita was treated with great respect in his garden. But today, every corner of the country is full of people with bad thoughts and dirty intentions, because of which today our sisters and daughters do not feel safe. This is why it has become common to hear incidents of rape and molestation every day. This is the reason that 86 incidents of rape are registered daily in the country, and in the year 2021, a total of 31 thousand 677 rape cases were registered. Not only that, but dowry harassment kills a girl every hour. He said that such incidents can stop only till we do not change our mindset. He said that before looking at another's daughter in the wrong way, we have to think that if we have a sister in place of this daughter and someone else molests her, then how will we feel?

Will work to strengthen Congress in Punjab: Gandhi

RAKESH JINDAL
PATIALA, OCT 5

Ever since the Aam Aadmi Party won big and formed a government in Punjab, there has been a slide in the fortunes of other parties in the state. Clouds of uncertainty continue to hang on the prospects of the Akali Dal and the Congress in Punjab.

However in order to salvage the sinking ship of Congress in Punjab, Former MP Dr. Dharamvir Gandhi has tweeted and announced his decision to help strengthen Congress in Punjab. Talking to the media, Dr. Dharamvir Gandhi said that if the opposition party is not strong in Punjab, then Punjab will become a totalitarian state. He said that today, democracy is being undermined and the rights of the states are being taken away.

He said that institutions such as CBI, Income Tax and ED and Supreme Court were created to protect democratic rights of the people. But today their functioning is being interfered with by the ruling government. He said that he could see a sense of resolve in the Congress party to fight against the prevailing malaise.

Of course, the Congress party also made many mistakes during its tenure, but under the circumstances, the Congress seems to be the only party that can protect the rights of the people.

He said that as Rahul Gandhi has raised his voice against the corporate houses in the Bharat Jodo Yatra and the speech given by Rahul Gandhi shows determination that Congress is the only party that has the capacity to rail against the agenda of the RSS. He said that unfortunately Punjab's regional party, the SAD chose to cosy up to the Center by putting interests of the state on the back burner. So it is only the Congress party which has a determination to protect democratic rights of the people.

5G challenges ahead

India's 5G moment has finally arrived. It heralds a new era of communications, with implications that are far and wide. Combined with Internet of Things (IoT), cloud, big data and artificial intelligence, 5G could be a critical enabler of the fourth industrial revolution. While there is no doubt the country would see transformational changes with the rollout of the fifth generation of mobile network, there are several challenges that have to be addressed before the country can fully harness the new technology. There is a need to upgrade fibre connectivity which, at present, connects only 30% of India's telecom towers. For an efficient 5G India launch and adoption, this number has to double. As per the findings of the Department of Telecommunications (DoT), the large-scale network infrastructure necessary for the 5G India launch is still inadequate. The National Broadband Mission expects around 2 million km of optical fibre to be installed country-wide, covering 70% of the nation's towers by 2024. Another hurdle is the ban on certain foreign telecom OEMs (original equipment manufacturer) upon which most of the 5G technology development depends. India needs to encourage and boost its local 5G hardware manufacturing at an unprecedented rate if it has to realise the 5G dream. An unreasonably high spectrum pricing, set by the Central government, is also a dampener for several cash-strapped telecom companies. There is a need for rationalisation of this spectrum pricing so that the government generates adequate revenue without hampering the 5G implementation plans. The 5G technology represents the next generation standard of wireless communication, connecting devices, machines, businesses, and people. It can be deployed at different band spectrums—low, medium and high. Since the range is much longer at the low band spectrum, it should be helpful for the rural areas. The arrival of 5G technology in India represents, according to industry experts, an immense opportunity to add a massive $450 billion to the economy. India is poised to have over 330 million 5G subscriptions by 2026 – another positive sign for telcos. Over the last few years, established players like Airtel, Jio and Vodafone have conducted extensive 5G trials in the country. The anticipation of 5G in India has been building up for years now. As a result, many manufacturers have already launched the latest 5G compatible smartphones in the country, with more in the pipeline. The potential of 5G in India is truly game-changing. A successful rollout of 5G services will lay the ground for a digital transformation, having wide ranging implications for economic activity. Once implemented, it would be able to support up to 1 million connected devices per sq km, compared to just 2,000 per sq km under 4G. In the last few years, digital connectivity has brought people closer in terms of communication and opened up new vistas in governance, business and economy.

Pakistan entangled in Russia-Ukraine war

Pakistan is entangled in yet another controversy as Islamabad has been found supplying arms and ammunition to Kyiv in the ongoing Russia-Ukraine war.

As per reports Pakistan is not impartial in the ongoing Russia-Ukraine conflict and has been involved in supplying arms and ammunition, made in Pakistan, for the end use of Ukraine. Islamabad is apparently utilising third-country-based defence suppliers and contractors to route these defence sales to Ukraine, reported Europe-based publication Geo-politik.

Credible inputs suggest that Islamabad-based arms supplier M/s DMI Associates has been in contact with Bulgaria-based firm M/s Defence Industry Group to facilitate the supply of manufactured defence stores to the Ukrainian government.

Separately, a Slovakia-based defence company M/s Chemica had reportedly approached M/s Kestral, a defence supplier of ammunition of Pak Ordinance Factories, on behalf of Ukraine's Defence Ministry, reported Geo-politik.

M/s Kestral may be using the conflict to spread its activities in countries adjacent to Ukraine, namely Poland, Romania and Slovakia, as the CEO of Kestral, Liaquat Ali Beg, visited these countries in May and June this year.

In another such development, Kyiv-based Ukrainian company M/s FORMAG was learnt to have approached Pakistan-based M/s Bluelines Cargo Pvt Ltd to ship gloves meant for use by the Ukrainian army.

A recent report published in Riafan, an online Russian web portal, states that Pakistan's Noor Khan Airbase in Rawalpindi has become a key base for the UK for the transportation of military equipment for the Ukrainian Army.

The evidence of Ukraine using Pakistan-made ammunition comes from no other than 'Ukraine Weapon Tracker', a website which tracks usage/capture of weapons and ammunitions in Ukraine. The website mentions that Armed Forces of Ukraine (AFU) artillery uses 122 mm high-explosive fragmentation artillery shells made in Pakistan Ordnance Factory, Punjab, reported Geo-politik.

After making a self-goal in February 2022, when then Pakistan's PM Imran Khan visited Russia during the onset of the Ukrainian war, this is another incident which puts the country's image at stake.

Islamabad is now out to make money off the Russia-Ukraine war by supplying much-needed ammunition to Ukraine. The Ukrainian military is reportedly using Pakistan-made artillery against Russian troops.

As per reports, 122 mm HR artillery is being used against Russian troops in the ongoing Russia-Ukraine war. These ties run deep, reported Geo-politik.

Pakistan has awarded a contract worth USD 85.6 million for modernizing T-80UD battle tanks to Ukrainian state arms conglomerate UkrOboronProm.

Earlier this year Ukraine also discussed with Pakistan new orders for the supply of 6TD1 and 6TD2 engines. In 2021 alone, Pakistan signed a USD 85.6 million contract to repair its T-80UD fleet in Ukraine, reported Geo-politik.

Ukraine's relations with Pakistan are largely about weapons. Over the past few decades, Islamabad has been among the most loyal clients of Ukraine's arms industry. Last year, Pakistan Army Chief visited Ukraine eyeing to shop "sophisticated" arms.

Pakistan has been keen to enhance defence cooperation with Ukraine on the basis of the Transfer of Technology and Joint ventures in the future, as both sides can benefit from each other's experience. Army Chief General Qamar Javed Bajwa stated this during his visit to a Military Test Site in Kharkiv region of Ukraine last year.

He had also witnessed field tests of various weapons and equipment and took a keen interest in the tests and appreciated the performance of all ranks associated with the projects, reported Geo-politik.

The Pakistan Army Chief said that defence cooperation between both countries has traditionally been an important component of Pak-Ukraine bilateral relations.

Twitter confirms Elon Musk buyout offer

Twitter on Tuesday (local time) confirmed that Tesla CEO Elon Musk sent a letter saying he will go through the deal he signed early this year to buy the platform for USD

Tesla's shares dropped by about 3 per cent. Musk has been locked in a bitter legal battle with Twitter since announcing in July this year that he was pulling the plug on his USD 44 billion purchase of the company following a complex, and months-long courtship. Musk had cancelled the deal, claiming that he was misled by Twitter concerning the number of bot accounts on its platform. These allegations were forthrightly rejected by the 44 billion. "Twitter issued this statement about today's news: We received the letter from the Musk parties which they have filed with the SEC. The intention of the Company is to close the transaction at $54.20 per share," the official account of Twitter Investor Relations wrote. After the news broke, that the billionaire is proposing to continue with USD 54.20 per share to buy social media platforms, Twitter's share price increased to 12.7 per cent before trading was stopped for the second time. On the contrary, company. The latest report on the Twitter buyout deal comes ahead of the Delaware Court hearing on October 17, where the two sides are expected to clash over the multi-billion dollar buyout deal. "This is a clear sign that Musk recognized heading into Delaware Court that the chances of winning vs. Twitter board was highly unlikely and this USD 44 billion deal was going to be completed one way or another," Reuters quoted Wedbush analyst Dan Ives as saying.

How setting a sleep schedule can help adolescents get more sleep

Teens may experience disrupted sleep, daytime fatigue, and changes in mood and focus when adjusting to a new sleep schedule at the start of the school year. Although they need eight to 10 hours of sleep per night to maintain physical health, emotional well-being and school performance, according to the National Sleep Foundation and the American Academy of Sleep Medicine, most adolescents get less than eight, especially on school nights.

Newly published research from RUSH in the journal SLEEP sheds light on how adolescents can get more shut-eye.

"There are a lot of changes a teen goes through," said Stephanie J. Crowley, PhD, associate professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences and the director of the Pediatric Chronobiology and Sleep Research Program at RUSH. "One specifically is a change to sleep biology that happens during puberty."

"The brain systems that control sleep change in such a way that it's easier for an adolescent to stay awake later into the evening. One of these systems -- the 24-hour circadian clock -- shifts later in time," Crowley said.

So there are two competing forces: one to go to bed earlier for the school schedule and the other a biological change that happens naturally to a teen's body.

Because of this complex conflict, RUSH researchers set out to test a two-week intervention that targets the circadian system with different behavioral measures and tries to help the teens figure out a better nighttime routine.

To combat teen sleep deprivation, the researchers used bright light therapy on two weekend mornings for a total of 2.5 hours. The bright light cues the internal clock to wake up a little earlier. This shift should make it easier for the teen to fall asleep at an appropriate time.

Less tired, irritable

Crowley and her team then helped counteract sleep deprivation by providing time management tools and addressing barriers to an earlier bedtime, like limiting certain after-school activities.

Researchers were able to shift the teens' bedtime by an hour and a half earlier, and their total sleep time increased by approximately an hour.

POEMS

End of Summer

An agitation of the air, A perturbation of the light

Admonished me the unloved year
Would turn on its hinge that night.

I stood in the disenchanted field
Amid the stubble and the stones,
Amazed, while a small worm lisped to me
The song of my marrow-bones.

Blue poured into summer blue,
A hawk broke from his cloudless tower,
The roof of the silo blazed, and I knew
That part of my life was over.

Already the iron door of the north
Clangs open: birds, leaves, snows
Order their populations forth,
And a cruel wind blows.

Climate change causing trees to become gluttons

Trees protect humans from the harshest effects of climate change by removing carbon dioxide from the atmosphere; but, new research indicates just how much carbon the woods have been stockpiling.

The study, published recently in the journal Nature Communications, discovers that higher carbon dioxide levels in the atmosphere have boosted the wood volume - or biomass - of forests in the United States.

Although other factors such as climate and pests can have an impact on a tree's volume, the study discovered that increased carbon levels consistently resulted in an increase in wood volume in 10 different temperate forest groups across the country. This shows that trees' rapid growth is helping to protect the Earth's ecology from the effects of global warming.

"Forests remove carbon from the atmosphere at a rate that is roughly 13% of our total emissions," said Brent Sohngen, co-author of the study and professor of environmental and resource economics at The Ohio State University. "While we emit billions of tonnes of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere, we remove a large portion of it simply by allowing our woods to thrive."

This is known as carbon fertilisation: an increase in the rate of photosynthesis, which combines energy from the sun, water, and nutrients from the ground and air to make fuel for life and stimulate plant development.

"It's well known that when you put a ton of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, it doesn't stay up there forever," Sohngen said. "A massive amount of it falls into the oceans, while the rest of it is taken up by trees and wetlands and those kinds of areas."

Over the previous two decades, forests in the United States have absorbed approximately 700-800 million tonnes of carbon dioxide every year, accounting for roughly 10% to 11% of the country's total carbon dioxide emissions, according to the study. While high amounts of carbon dioxide can harm natural systems and infrastructure, trees have no problem gorging themselves on Earth's extra supply of greenhouse gas.

To put it another way, if you envision a tree as a big cylinder, the extra volume discovered by the study equals one extra tree ring. Sohngen explained. Although such growth may not be visible to the average person, compared to trees 30 years ago, present vegetation is around 20% to 30% larger than it used to be. When applied to the Coast Redwood forests, which are home to some of the world's largest trees, even a small percentage increase equals a significant boost in forest carbon storage. Due to high carbon dioxide levels, researchers discovered that even elderly giant trees continue to add biomass as they mature.

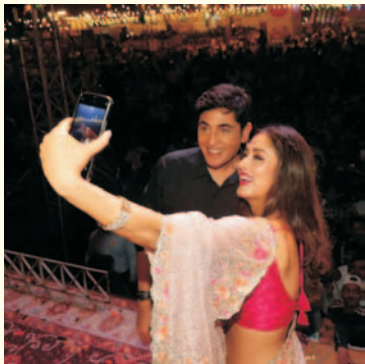

Unlike the impacts of climate change, which vary by location and time, the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere mixes relatively uniformly, so every region on Earth has approximately the same amount, according to Sohngen.

Sohngen's team used historical data from the US Forest Service Forest Inventory and Analysis Program (USFS-FIA) to analyse how the wood volume of various forest groups has evolved over the last few decades to assess whether the chemical compound was responsible for beefing up our biome. According to the study, there was a considerable increase in tree wood volume between 1970 and 2015, which correlates with a significant increase in carbon emissions.

Researchers were also able to use this procedure to see if there were any changes between naturally occurring and cultivated trees. Sohngen predicted that planted trees would have a greater fertilising effect since planters generally select the best seeds to put in just the best areas.

Understanding sudden cardiac arrest and how basic life support can help

Cardiac arrest refers to when the heart stops functioning, leading to unexpected death, also called cardiac death. It is one the biggest causes of death in the world today, with over half of all heart disease-related deaths ending with cardiac arrests. Indians are at an increased risk of succumbing to heart diseases, and this number has been significantly increasing over the years. According to a WHO census, approximately 4,280 out of every lakh Indians die due to cardiac arrests!

Speaking about the risk, Dr Rajesh T R, Consultant Cardiothoracic and Vascular Surgeon, Kauvery Hospital, Bengaluru, says, "After a cardiac arrest, blood circulation stops. There are four to six minutes before brain death and death occur. Chances of survival reduce by 7-10% with every passing minute." It is important to note that heart attacks and sudden cardiac arrests are completely different from each other. These words are often used interchangeably, despite the fact they are not the same. So what actually happens during a heart attack and cardiac arrest? Dr Rajesh helps us understand.

Heart Attack Vs. Cardiac Arrest
The heart muscles require oxygen-rich blood to function, which is provided through the coronary arteries. A heart attack occurs when these arteries are blocked and hence unable to supply blood to the heart. "These blockages need to be addressed immediately, to limit the extent of permanent damage to the heart muscles," says Dr Rajesh.

In a cardiac arrest, the heart just stops beating. The blood pressure drops and blood supply to all the organs, including the brain is affected. "Without blood flow to the brain, a person will lose consciousness. Death can follow instantaneously unless emergency treatment is instituted. The cause of a sudden cardiac arrest may or may not be related to the heart," explains Dr Rajesh.

Causes Of Sudden Cardiac Arrest

Stone pitching work on river bank near Adibadri temple washed away

PREETI RANI
SADHAURA, OCT 5

At the religious site of Adibadri located in Halka Sadhaura, the stone pitching work done by the Irrigation Department in the river near the temple premises last year has been washed away by the rain. Although the department is calling it a temporary structure, the fact remains that work done at a cost of around Rs 23 lakh could not last even for 1 year.

Efforts are underway to develop the religious site Adibadri as a tourist destination. A huge budget is being spent for this but no one cares about the quality of the works. While two MLAs of BJP in the district and one former MLA from Halka Sadhaura are also from BJP and there is no counting of BJP functionaries. No one comes to see what is happening here. The lack of toilet facilities in the temple premises and the use of poor quality bricks in the building being constructed exposes the carelessness. Last year, the Irrigation Department had done stone pitching to stop the erosion along the river in the back of the temple. But the stone bridge itself started crumbling, so how will the erosion be stopped? The department had spent about Rs 23.5 lakh on this, but spending such amount that even for 1 year if the structure does not support itself, it will be called a waste of money. Adi Badri, which has always been seriously discussed by the state government, is putting a question mark on the work being done there. Regarding this, the SDO of the department, Jasveer Pathania, said that due to the flow of water, one side stone has given way, and added that the work was up to the mark. Regarding this, the concerned Executive Engineer Surendra Kumar says that this work was almost finished before he joined here. It was a temporary structure to prevent erosion and there is no budget for its maintenance yet.

Roti, clothes and house are the three basic necessities of life and in this too, first of all a person needs bread. SHORT

Bumrah will be missed, says Dravid

INDORE: Team India Head Coach Rahul Dravid on Tuesday said Jaspreet Bumrah will be missed and along with it his personality around the group.

"It happens, but it is a great opportunity for someone to stand up. We will miss him, we will miss his personality around the group for sure," he said in a post-match presentation ceremony here.

India lost the third T20I by 49 runs to South Africa, but won the series 2-1.

On Dinesh Karthik's promotion, Dravid said the needed match-practice in the batting department and at one stage, both Rishabh Pant and Karthik, could have clinched the game for India with their aggressive batting.

"I think today was an opportunity to give these guys some batting. It is tough on guys like Dinesh and Rishabh who don't get too many hits in the middle. I felt they were batting really well at one moment, had they played longer we might have got closer," he said.

"I feel batting at 6, it's always tough when you have to bat just 5-10 balls, so it's always nice to get a few balls under their belt like they did today," he added.

Dravid also lauded Harshal Patel and the rest of the lower order for batting really well.

Giving a message ahead of the T20 World Cup in Australia, Dravid hopes India does well and towards which, the players are working hard.

"In tournaments like those, you need to play really well but we need a bit of luck as well. We hope to bring smiles to people's faces. I think since crowds have been allowed into stadiums, we have got great support everywhere we have gone and the boys are really encouraged by that support. We will have that in Australia as well, we will try our best," he said.

On India's aggressive batting, Dravid said, "We have made a decision after the last T20 World Cup where we sat down as a group and decided to play more positively. We believe we have the quality as a group to play more aggressively, we have been able to do that without being bowled out too often."

Thomas Dennerby announces 21-member squad for FIFA U-17 Women's World Cup

BHUBANESWAR : India U-17 National Women's team head coach Thomas Dennerby on Wednesday announced 21 players squad for the FIFA U-17 World Cup 2022 scheduled to begin next week.

India have been drawn into Group A alongside USA, Morocco and Brazil. They will face the USA on October 11, followed by Morocco and Brazil on October 14 and October 17, respectively, at the Kalinga Stadium in Bhubaneswar. The other two venues for the FIFA U-17 Women's World Cup India 2022 are Goa and Navi Mumbai.

"It's a new situation for everyone. India have never played in the World Cup before. This is a different ball game altogether. It's a unique chance to show everyone that we have prepared well and will not allow anyone to run over us. Everyone wants to play the World Cup, but I can only select the best 21 in the squad," Coach Dennerby said.

"When you are on the field, everything is held back behind and you just have to focus on the game. That's what the girls need to do. We are not going into the tournament as the favourites. I believe the pressure then is on the opponents," said the India coach said.

Pointing out the importance of performing well on the pitch, Dennerby said: "The performance is key for us. And I hope the girls are not much nervous and will play with confidence."

T20I rankings: Suryakumar inches closer to top spot

AGENCY DUBAI: Indian batters profit after impressive showings in the South Africa series as Suryakumar Yadav inches closer to the top spot while opener KL Rahul jumps to 14th after jumping seven spots in the ICC rankings released on Wednesday.

India's Suryakumar Yadav moved considerably closer to Pakistan's Mohammad Rizwan, the number one ranked T20I batter in the world, intensifying the competition.

By concluding India's most recent T20I series at home against South Africa with two half-centuries and as their highest run scorer with a total of 119 runs, Yadav maintained his astounding climb in 2022.

Yadav's performance brought him to within 16 rating points of Rizwan in the latest T20I batter rankings, which the ICC revealed on October 5. The 32-year-old should have the opportunity to take home the top spot at the 2022 ICC T20 World Cup in Australia owing to his recent impressive showing.

With an impressive total of 316 runs in the recent seven-match T20I series against England, Rizwan finished as the series' top run scorer. However, the veteran was rested for the sixth game of the series and managed just one run in the series finale in Lahore, causing the right-hander to lose important breathing room at the top of the rankings.

The competition for first place is so close that Yadav might have even passed his Pakistani counterpart in the final game of India's series against South Africa in Indore with a sizable score, but the right-hander was out for only eight runs.

While a number of other batters from across the world made enormous leaps on the most recent set of rankings, Pakistan captain Babar Azam is still third on the T20I batter rankings and should not be ignored for reclaiming the top spot.

India opener KL Rahul jumps seven spots to 14th on the updated list on the back of his 108 runs from two matches against the Proteas, while South Africa trio Quinton de Kock (up eight spots to 12th), Rilee Rossouw (up 23 places to 20th) and David Miller (up 10 spots to 29th) were also notable movers up the list.

After a decent series for England against Pakistan, dependable top-order performer Dawid Malan moves up one rank to fifth, and teammate Ben Duckett (up eight spots to tie for 24th) is also improving.

Following the conclusion of two recent series in India and Pakistan, there has been some shuffling behind Australia seamer Josh Hazlewood in the new list of T20I bowlers.

South African and English spinners Tabraiz Shamsi and Adil Rashid both fall three spots inside the top 10, while Afghanistan's Rashid Khan, Wanindu Hasaranga, and experienced Australian Adam Zampa all move up two slots apiece.

Keshav Maharaj of South Africa has moved up seven positions to tenth place overall after a successful series against India in which the 32-year-old took four wickets at an economy rate of just over seven, breaking into the spin-dominated top 10.

Glad I could contribute to winning side: SA batter Rilee Rossouw tonight was my night. We had a discussion out there, and he (de Kock) said you be the guy scoring. They are a world-class side. I am glad that I could contribute to the winning side tonight," said Rilee Rossouw said in a post-match presentation.
