NIA raids 5 locations in Kashmir against newly floated Pakbacked terror outfits NEW DELHI: The National Investigation Agency (NIA) on Tuesday cracked down once again on the newly-floated offshoots of proscribed Pakistan-backed terrorist outfits operating in Jammu and Kashmir by conducting raids at five locations in the three districts. The locations searched included Anantnag, Shopian and Pulwama in the Kashmir valley. The agency claimed to have seized several digital devices containing massive incriminating data in these raids. NEW DELHI: Water in Yamuna crossed the danger mark and an orange alert was is sued for Delhi as the areas in the city continued to face water-logging due to incessant rains on Saturday and Sunday and a fresh spell of rainfall on Monday. The excess rainfall has impacted all sections, including the poor, the daily wagers and those commuting to reach their destinations. While families around the Yamuna living in hutments will have to shift in case water level rises further, rainwater also entered the homes of some civil servants. The plight of locals across the societal divide has only served to reinforce the fact that the floods, this year, have hit the poor as well as the powerful. As the rainwater inundated roads and led to long queues of vehicles stuck in the downpour, residents, including people living in the diplomatic enclave in Chanakyapuri, vented out their migivings over Delhi's inadequate drainage system.

But the court said he would continue till July 31 after the Centre expressed concern about continuity in the middle of a peer review by the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), the global terror financing watchdog.

The Centre had cited the peer re-view every time it extended Mr Mishra's term. In May, the government had told the Supreme Court that he would retire in November. "This officer is not

SC stays NGT order appointing Delhi LG as chairperson of high-level committee on Yamuna

NEW DELHI: The Supreme Court on Tuesday stayed an order of the National Green Tribunal (NGT) appointing Delhi Lieutenant Governor Vinai Kumar Saxena as the chairperson of a high-level committee on the Yamuna rejuvenation project. A bench of Chief Justice of India DY Chandrachud and Justices PS Narasimha and Manoj Misra issued notice on a plea by the Delhi government challenging the January 9, 2023 order of the National Green Tribunal (NGT).

In its plea, the Delhi Government had said that LG's appointment as Chairperson was a "violation of the constitutional scheme of governance" and two Constitution bench orders of Supreme Court passed in 2018 and 2023.

In January this year, the NGT had constituted the committee to address the issue of pollution in the Yamuna.

The government has said that the executive powers granted to the LG through the NGT order "encroach upon areas exclusively under the competence of the elected government".

Rainfury force bride and groom to solemnise wedding online

SHIMLA, JULY 11 (UNI)

The rain fury and unprecedented rainfall in Himachal Pradesh forced a bride and groom to solemnise their wedding online, which was uploaded on Facebook posts by former CPI (M) MLA Rakesh Singha.

The bride, Shivani Thakur, of Sees village of Bhuntar in Kullu District, was expecting a barat' of her groom, Ashish Singha, of Mangsu village, Tehsil Kotgarh, from Shimla District, but inclement weather played spoilsport.

Earlier, the Barat party of 30 people, along with Rakesh Singha, couldn't move away from Bithal on NH 5 and had to return to Kotgarh. Having no option, both families decided to perform the marriage online on Monday because it was difficult to move to Kullu due to worse weather and perform 'lagan' (the scheduled time of the wedding ritual) in time. The bride and groom perform an online wedding sitting in their respective homes, which is a first-of-itskind event in the state. Later, two families also shared photographs of the wedding ceremony on social media, displaying how both families witnessed and participated with full emotion while quietly sitting at home. The bride is likely to move to the groom's house with improving weather conditions

The bride often moves to the groom's house in a wedding tradition of hills, and marriage rituals are also performed at the house of the groom

Yamuna's condition worsens in Karnal

SHIV KUMAR SHARMA KARNAL, JULY 11

The condition of the Yamuna river in Karnal is bad. The river is in spate. The villages situated on the banks of Yamuna have been flooded. On Monday evening, the dam of village Garhpar island was broken, which has not yet been closed, due to which water reached about 8 villages nearby. About 24 villages have now been affected by the flood. At the same time, the administration tried continuously for many hours by putting earthen bags with dumpers and closing the embankment cut with machines. But later the army had to be called. Now the army has taken over the front. There is 3 to 4 feet of water in Kalsaura. Apart from this, crops standing in the streets and fields of Labkari, Dera Halwana, Dabkoli, Bibipur Bahraman, Badarpura and Sikandarpur villages were submerged and now water has slowly started entering the villages

District Fatehgarh Sahib was also affected by this natural calamity. The administration, political and social welfare organizations also came forward to help the people affected by the flood, but the calamity was so big. Along with this, the efforts of advocate Lakhbir Singh Rai, MLA from Fatehgarh Sahib, to pull people out of the water by driving a tractor, are being appreciated everywhere.If we examine the causes of this flood, along with the heavy rains, there are centuries-old cho passing through this district and illegal encroachment on the villages and city ponds. Farmer Varinderpal Singh Sahi, said that the width of this chou in some places is one hundred feet and in some places two hundred feet, but due to illegal encroachments. it has remained only 15 to 20 feet in many places. Passing in front of the district administration complex, this chow has become a victim of illegal encroachments. Shops, complexes, hospitals and religious buildings have been built inside this chow, who sold the land of Chow on what basis are also questions and in the future also during such natural calamities the general public may be affected and the administration may appear helpless.

Many senior officials of the district tried to remove the encroachments from this chou from time to time, but the administration was helpless in the face of political pressure because there were many political leaders among the encroachers.

Due to heavy rains and cloudburst in Himachal Pradesh, many pictures of the devastation are coming out, but despite so much rain, people are worried due to water shortage in Kangra district. Due to torrential rains in many places, it has become difficult for people to come out. With heavy rains, swollen rivers and streams are causing tremendous damage and large houses are collapsing like a pack of cards. The water thrashing the mountain slopes is carrying away whatever comes in its way, but in the midst of this rain, people are craving for drinking water. Many areas of district Kangra have not received water for the last three days. The people of Himachal, who depend on the supply water for drinking, are facing great difficulties amid heavy rains. Water has become heavy especially in Dharamshala, McLeodganj and low-lying areas. Natural sources have also been damaged due to heavy rains and drinking water schemes being run from there have been damaged. No initiative has yet been taken by the Municipal Corporation, Dharamshala and the administration to deliver water to people's homes, due to which people have been forced to wander for drinking water. After the heavy rains, the situation has worsened after dirty sewer water entered the house in Rihalpura, Kangra. At the same time, apart from water, electricity has also become a big problem.

Editorial Flawed revolution

axalism or Maoism in India, like any oth-er Left-ist movem-ent around the globe, draws its ideological basis from the Bolshevik revolution. Vla-di-mir Lenin tweaked Marxism to suit Russian conditions. The peasantry was to have a larger role and the Russian army was to be the main pro-tagonist in the envisaged armed insurrection. With egalitarianism as its basis, the idea was to enforce societal control over the aspects of governance and nation-building.

As per Leninism, the revolution was to be steered over several phases. These were people's revolution leading to socialism and, then, Marxism based on the commune. The call made by Lenin had mass appeal in the sense that the masses could identify with the ideological underpinnings. Lenin's efforts to embrace the burning issues were translated into three slogans 'land to the tiller', 'bread to the hungry', and 'rest to the army'. The effective tool of mass mobilisation made Lenin an international icon and inspired Leftist revolutions across the world.

The political Left in India, too, inspired by revolutionary movements the world over, strived for a similar feat to liberate the exploited classes in the country. However, the planning lacked deliberations and efforts were not made to adapt the foreign experience to the Indian context. The inception of Naxal ideology can be traced back to the call for a united front comprising the peasantry and the working class given by the peasant leader, Swami Sahajanand Saraswati. The movement was dovetailed into the Indian freedom struggle and had a threepronged objective — peasant revolution, national independence, and emancipation of the downtrodden. An effort towards this was attempted in Telangana but a united front could not materialise due to a weak and divided leadership. The CPI seemed to have inferred that a socialist revolution in India could only be initiated at the behest of capitalists rather than as a people's revolution. It thus supported the Nehruvian model of mix-ed economy that had elements of public and private sectors. This approach did not find support amongst the entire party, leading to a split in the CPI giving rise to the CPI(M), followed by the falling apart of the Charu Mazumdar-led faction called Naxalites. First generation Na-xalites were often termed as 'men in hurry'. These Ro-m-antics did not gauge the importance of mass mobilisation and went on to commit grave blunders. They car-ried out unwarranted class annihilation, which se-g-mented their own support base. This initial phase of Naxalism was smothered by the early 1970s.

China escalates chip war with new curbs against US

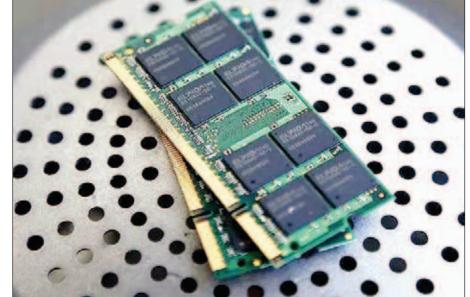

hina is escalating its chip war with the United States by imposing export controls on the overseas sales of gallium and germanium, elements essential to making semiconductors, CNN Business reported.

China's trump card is seen as the counter-attack to potential US tightening of [its] AI chip ban. "We see this as China's second, and much bigger, countermeasure to the tech war, and likely a response to the potential US tightening of [its] AI chip ban," said Jef-feries analysts as cited by CNN Business. They said that sanctioning one of America's biggest memory chip-makers, Micron Technology (MU), in May was the first. According to CNN Business, Gallium is a soft, silvery metal commonly used to produce compounds that are key materials in semiconductors and light-emitting diodes. Meanwhile, Germanium is a hard, greyish-white and brittle metalloid that is used in the production of optical fibres that can transmit light and electronic data.

The trade war started in October when the Biden administration unveiled a set of export controls banning Chinese companies from buying advanced chips and chipmaking equipment without a license. Chips are vital for everything from smartphones and self-driving cars to advanced computing and weapons manufacturing. US officials have talked about the move as a measure to protect national security interests. And to make it more effective the US needed other key suppliers, located in the Netherlands and Japan, to join them and they did. China eventually retaliated. In April, it launched a cybersecurity probe into Micron before banning the company from selling to Chinese companies working on key infrastructure projects. On Monday, Beijing announced the restrictions on gallium and germanium, as per CNN Business. The export controls have drawn comparisons with China's reported attempts in early 2021 to restrict exports of rare earths, a group of 17 elements for which China controls more than half of the global supply.

Gallium and germanium do not belong to this group of minerals. Like rare earths, they can be expensive to mine or produce. This is because they are usually formed as a by-product of mining more common metals, primarily aluminium, zinc and copper, and processed in countries that produce them. According to the US Geological Survey, China is the world's leading producer of both gal-lium and germanium as it ac-counted for 98 per cent of the global production of Gallium and 68 per cent of the refin-ery production of germanium.

'The economies of scale in China's extensive and increasingly integrated mining and processing operations, along with state subsidies, have allowed it to export processed minerals at a cost that operators elsewhere can't match, perpetuating the country's market dominance for many critical commodities," analysts from Eurasia

Group said. Shares of Chinese producers of the two raw materials surged by 10 per cent on July 4, reported CNN Business. As per the US Geological Survey, the United States is dependent on China for these two critical elements. It imported more than 50 per cent of the gallium and germanium it used in 2021 from the country. Eurasia Group analysts described China's export controls as a "warning shot." The timing of announcing the imposition of export control on the two materials doesn't seem like a casual decision. Jefferies ana-lysts said, "It gives the US at least two days to digest and come up with a well-considered response." However, the move is not considered "a death blow" to the United States and its allies. The curbs announced this week are "just the start," Wei Jianguo, a former deputy commerce minister, told the official China Daily on Wednesday, adding China has more tools in its arsenal with which to retaliate.

"If the high-tech restric-tions on China become tougher in the future, China's countermeasures will also escalate," he was quoted as say-

Analysts believe this too. Rare earths, which are not difficult to find but are complicated to process, are also critical in making semiconductors and could be the next target, according to CNN Business.

"If this action doesn't change the US-China dynamics, more rare earth export controls should be expected,' Jefferies analysts said.

It has been noticed that whenever China attempts to leverage its dominance in rare earths have reduced the availability and raised prices. Higher prices have spurred greater competition by making mining and processing ventures outside of China more cost-competitive, they said.

We already know that these genes impact traits and behaviours such as hunger and emotional eating, but what makes this study different is that we tested the influence of two types of dietary restraint -- rigid and flexible -- on the effect of these behaviours. What we discovered for the first time was that increasing both types of restraint could potentially improve BMI in people genetically at risk; meaning that restraint-based interventions could be useful to target the problem." Genes linked to obesity increase BMI, with up to a quarter of this effect explained by increases in hunger and uncontrolled rientists are investigating techniques to S monitor indoor environment in real time for viruses now that the Covid-19 pandemic's emergency phase is over. Researchers at Washington University in St. Louis have developed a real-time monitor that can identify any SARS-CoV-2 virus variant in a room in roughly 5 minutes by fusing recent advancements in aerosol sampling technology with an ultrasensitive biosensing method.

Air monitor can identify Covid-19 virus in five minutes

The inexpensive, proof-of-concept device could be used in hospitals and health care facili-ties, schools and public places to help detect CoV-2 and potentially monitor for other respiratory virus aerosols, such as influenza and respiratory syncytial virus (RSV). Results of their work on the monitor, which they say is the most sensitive detector available, are published July 10 in Nature Communications.

The interdisciplinary team of researchers from the McKelvey School of Engineering and the School of Medicine consists of Rajan Chakrabarty, the Harold D. Jolley Career Development Associate Professor of energy, environmental & chemical engineering in McKelvey Engineering; Joseph Puthussery, a postdoctoral research associate in Chakrabarty's lab; John Cirrito, a professor of neurology at the School of Medicine; and Carla Yuede, an associate professor of psychiatry at the School of Medicine. "There is nothing at the moment that tells us how safe a room is," Cirrito said. "If you are in a room with 100 people, you don't want to find out five days later whether you could be sick or not. The idea with this device is that you can know essentially in real time, or every 5 minutes, if there is a live virus." Cirrito and Yuede had previously developed a micro-immunoelectrode (MIE) biosensor that detects amyloid beta as a biomarker for Alzheimer's disease and wondered if it could be converted into a detector for SARS-CoV-2. They reached out to Chakrabarty, who assembled a team that included Puthussery, who had expertise in building real-time instruments to measure the toxicity of air.

To convert the biosensor from detecting amyloid beta to coronavirus, the researchers exchanged the antibody that recognizes amyloid beta for a nanobody from llamas that recognizes the spike protein from the SARS-CoV-2 virus. David Brody, MD, PhD, a former faculty member in the Department of Neurology at the School of Medicine and an author on the paper, developed the nanobody in his lab at the National Institutes of Health (NIH). The nanobody is small, easy to reproduce and modify and inexpensive to make, the researchers said. "The nanobody-based electrochemical approach is faster at detecting the virus because it doesn't need a reagent or a lot of processing steps," Yuede said. "SARS-CoV-2 binds to the nanobodies on the surface, and we can induce oxidation of tyrosines on the surface of the virus using a technique called square wave voltammetry to get a measurement of the amount of virus in the sample." Chakrabarty and Puthussery integrated the biosensor into an air sampler that operates based on the wet cyclone technology. Air enters the sampler at very high velocities and gets mixed centrifugally with the fluid that lines the walls of the sampler to create a surface vortex, thereby trapping the virus aerosols. The wet cyclone sampler has an automated pump that collects the fluid and sends it to the biosensor for seamless detection of the virus using electrochemistry.

The challenge with airborne aerosol detectors is that the level of virus in the indoor air is so diluted that it even pushes toward the limit of detection of polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and is like finding a needle in a haystack," Chakrabarty said. "The high virus recovery by the wet cyclone can be attributed to its extremely high flow rate, which allows it to sample a larger volume of air over a 5-minute sample collection compared with commercially available samplers." Most commercial bioaerosol samplers operate at relatively low flow rates, Puthussery said, while the team's monitor has a flow rate of about 1,000 liters per minute, making it one of the highest flow-rate devices available. It is also compact at about 1 foot wide and 10 inches tall and lights up when a virus is detected, alerting administrators to increase airflow or circulation in the room.

The Rise of Digital Drugs: Ramnik Kaur Explores the Impact of Virtual Intoxication Are you on a digital drug ? Lets answer this. If you experience a mild sate of panic, for not watching your phone,t.v,social media , video games,then yes you are on a digital drug. Reason being every time we consume social media our brain releases a chemical called Dopamine, a happy hormone. It is resposible for allowing us to feel pleasure satisfaction motivation. But the problem is Dopamine boost is temporary and leads to letdown which can negatively affect our impulse control. Prolong use of gadgets acts like a digital drug for our brain. We experience less pleasure when not using our gadgets because we use lot of Dopamine at once and we enter a state of Dopamine deficit that is a state of anxiety and stress.Lets counter this.Firstly we need to understand that social media is basically a way to drugify human connections. We can always bring some changes. Good way to start is to turn off notifications on your phone, set password for all the applications so that you need to type it each time you open your phone, keep it on sleep mode at night, set screen timings. After all we humans have evolved over millions of years to want to connect with people.Just imagine how different would be our life be if we just had text and video call.

Taking to Instagram, Madonna shared a post which reads, "Thank you for your positive energy, Prayers and words of healing and encouragement. I have felt your love. I'm on the road to recovery and incredibly grateful for all the blessings in my life. My first thought when I woke up in the hospital was my children. My second thought was that I did not want to disappoint anyone who bought tickets for my tour. I also didn't want to let down the people who worked tirelessly with me over the last few months to create my show. I hate to disappoint any-one. My focus now is my health and getting stronger and I as-sure you, I'll be back with you as soon as I can! The current plan is to reschedule the North American leg of the tour and to eteran actor Zeenat Aman made her place in the industry in the era of the 70s and 80s with her style statement and bold looks. Even today, she keeps inspiring her fans with her thoughts and the way she carries herself at this age. Zeenat took to her Instagram handle to share a picture of her and said that this is her 50th post on Instagram, which is dedicated to those who are not hesitant or shy away from flaunting their grey hair.

She wrote, "Grey weather, grey hair... and a splash of colour to off-set it all! I didn't intend for my grey hair to be a statement, but a statement it has become. In fact, yesterday I read a tweet by someone who said they know at least three people who have been inspired to stop colouring their hair since I made my Instagram debut! I thought this was a wonderful compliment. If embracing my natural hair is encouraging others to do the same, then I'm all the happier for it.

"So, with my 50th post on Instagram I want to celebrate all of you who are flaunting your beautiful silver hair! Please post a story of yourself (or your silver-haired loved one) and tag me in it. I'd love to share your pictures to my own stories. After all, life isn't black and white, it's grey!" she added. Archana Puran Singh reacted and commented, "Lovvvvvve what you write Zee'

One of her fans mentioned, "Multiple generations of women are now inspired by a real role model instead of someone ephemeral. What a refreshing breath of air you've been ma'am. You remind me of my ma- she stopped colouring her hair 10 years ago and inspired everyone with her grey styling." Another fan wrote, "Yes absolutely. Grey is beautiful. On my 40th when i had enough grey hair for friends to advise me to color my hair, I decided I am never going to color my hair and embrace all the sign of 'ageing'- greys, lines, receding hair lines with confidence. And I think I look fabulous!

On the work front, the actress has given several hits such as 'Satyam Shivam Sundaram', 'Hare Rama Hare Krishna', 'Qurbaani', 'Dhund', 'Don', 'Manoranjan' and 'Yaadon Ki Baarat', was known for doing unconventional roles in her era when many actresses are reluctant to take up those characters.

ctor Preity Zinta took to Instagram to share pictures of her tids Jai Zinta Goodenough and Gia Zinta Goodenough after their mundan ceremony.

She wrote in the caption about the ceremony and its importance as per Hindu tradition.

"So the "Mundan ceremony" finally happened this weekend. For Hindus the first shaving off the hair for babies is considered to be a gesture of purification from the memory of their previous births and freedom from the past. Here are Jai & Gia post their mundan ceremony. #tradition #mundanceremony #ting", she wrote in the caption.

After her post, many of her fans and industry friends congratulated her. Actor Bobby Deol also dropped heart emoji. Preity often shares adorable family pictures. Previously, taking a break from the IPL matches, Preity shared a video of her baby Jai from her vacations with her husband and kids. "My kind of heaven. The last couple of days have been amazing. Mountains, family, clean air & a digital detox. No better sound than hearing mama ... mama for the first time from the kiddos.

RajKummar Rao supports UP Police's campaign against online shopping frauds

n line with the Yogi government's efforts to control cyber fraud and crime to safeguard the hard-earned money of the people of the state, the Uttar Pradesh Police have launched a social media campaign, which has got actor RajKummar Rao's support.

The campaign, which aims at raising people's awareness of online shopping fraud as well as to alert them against it, has got the overwhelming support of the public. The UP Police tweeted from its Twitter handle @UPPolice on July 9 as part of the campaign, on which RajKummar praised the cyber-crime awareness campaign of the UP Police, appealing to people to be on alert against online shopping frauds. This tweet from UP Police has been viewed by more than 20,000 people so far, retweeted by about 400 and liked by more than 500 people. It may be known that in the conference of the Director General of Police/Inspector General of Police, a proposal was made to make common people aware of cybercrime and helpline in regional languages. In this sequence, Uttar Pradesh Police has roped in the 'Stree' actor to make the campaign more effective in conveying the message of cyber security to the people. In future, the UP Police plans to engage more actors and sportspersons in its cybercrime awareness campaign.
