AGENCY NEW DELHI, OCT 25

India will partially resume visa services in Canada -- closed last month amid a diplomatic row from October 26, the Indian High Commission said in Ottawa on Wednesday.

Services will resume for entry visa, business visa, medical visa, and conference visa, the High Commission said.

India, which strongly denied the allegation, also expelled a Canadian diplomat and accused Canada of harboring terrorists and Khalistan supporters. It said that Canada's inaction against extremists was a long-standing

No leniency for violators of stubble burning norms, reiterates DC Aashika Jain

SHASHI PAL JAIN MOHALI, OCT 25

Taking a serious view of the surge in stubble burning cases in the last two days, Sahibzada Ajit Singh Nagar Deputy Commissioner Mrs Aashika Jain has made it clear that violators in stubble burning incidents would not be spared.

During the review of the working of SDMs, Cluster Officers and Nodal Officers, she asked them to be vigilant to such incidents and swung in action immediately by dousing the fire with the help of fire tenders or other ways besides imposing environmental compensation. She said that though the administration has provided a number of Crop Residue Management machinery on subsidy to the cooperative societies, groups and individual farmers, rise in fire incidents is clearly an act of environmental degradation that could not be tolerated. Giving details of the fire incidents reported by the Punjab Remote Sensing Centre through the Satellite, she said that we have got a list of 79 incidents, out of which, upon visiting 55 sites, 37 cases were found no crop burning while 18 cases have been observed as fire incidents of crop residues. The cases observed as crop burning incidents have been taken seriously and an environmental compensation of Rs 47500 has been imposed in these cases. The cases include one in Mohali Sub Division while 17 in Derabassi

Sub Division. She said that in the last two days, PRSC has reported 24 incidents that are being observed by visiting the fields by the Nodal officers.

The Deputy Commissioner further said that as the National Green Tribunal has also taken serious note of the increasing incidents in the state, so the violators would not be spared. She said the SDMs have been said to made red entries in the revenue records of the violators besides recovery of environmental compensation imposed on them. Making repeated appeal to the farmers, she said that the district has an abundant quantity of Crop Residue Management machinery and we should use it maximum to manage stubble without setting it on fire. She said that the Administration has also issued helpline numbers; 0172-2219505 and 2219506 for

March in support of 1158 Assistant Professors by student organisation

AMRITSAR (CHARANJIT SINGH ARORA): The student organisation Sath marched in support of 1158 protesting assistant professors at Guru Nanak Dev University. Recently, after Professor Balwinder Kaur, a member of '1158 Assistant Professor Morcha', committed suicide by jumping into the canal, this matter has flared up again. The previous state government distributed appointment letters to 1158 assistant professors after the completion of the recruitment process, but only a few got the stations. The AAP government stopped the recruitment of these professors on the pretext of flaws in the recruitment process, after which the victimised youth were protesting outside the residence of Higher Education Minister Harjot Bains for the past several weeks.

Balwinder Kaur committed suicide by jumping into the Bhakra canal as the said minister was not hearing the protestors. Instead of giving justice in the matter, the government has arrested the husband and father-in-law of the deceased. The student organisation Sath raised its voice against this injustice and organised a justice march in Guru Nanak Dev University. Jujhar Singh, the leader of the organisation, while addressing the march, said that 1158 assistant professors recruited after two decades should be reinstated immediately. Along with this,

A new agenda

The prime minister, Narendra Modi, the national security adviser, Ajit Doval, and the foreign minister, S. Jaishankar, deserve great credit for their handling of the Ukraine war, which has placed India in an undoubted sweet spot in world affairs — this despite intense covert and overt external pressure and the Indian media generally echoing Western propaganda in playing up Ukranian success and portraying the Russian president, Vladimir Putin, as demented and as a threat to the democratic value system. The United Nations Charter's Article 2.4 urges nations to refrain from the "threat or use of force", each contingency having equal validity. The deliberate eastwards expansion of NATO after 1990, despite innumerable protestations from Moscow, threatened Russia's security with encirclement, obliging it to retaliate forcefully and setting preconditions of Ukraine's demilitarisation and neu-

Initially, both NATO and Russia made grievous errors; Russia's drive towards Kyiv with inadequate manpower and weaponry wrongly supposed that resistance from a fellow Slav and former Soviet nation-state would be minimal, while NATO underestimated Russia's economic and military resilience against countless packages of unilateral sanctions and believed that the rest of the world would unite behind Ukraine. What is clear, after about 600 days, is that Russia will not be defeated, and it is unlikely that Ukraine will fully recover the 18% territory it has lost.

Ukraine was never a push-over for Russia; in July 2022, it had an active military strength of 700,000 and, with para-military added, close to one million. Ukraine also benefitted from billions of dollars of military equipment and training from NATO, operational planning support, intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance. At every stage, the United States of America has escalated the weaponry with controversial depleted uranium and cluster munitions and, lately, ATACMS (army tactical missile system) and F-16 aircraft. It uses leverage to force non-NATO suppliers to assist Ukraine, such as intrigues to remove the Pakistan premier, Imran Khan, in 2022 for his "aggressively neutral stand" and facilitating an IMF bailout of $3 billion in return for Pakistani arms to Ukraine.

America has thus far donated to Ukraine over $110 billion in funding the Ukrainian military and civil establishment, including $46.6 billion in military equipment. The European Union has expended $90 billion, including $27 billion in military aid.

Jordan's Queen criticises "double standard" of West

Jordan's Queen Rania has lashed out at the "glaring double standard" of the Western mainstream media in the ongoing Israel-Hamas war, for failing to condemn civilian deaths in Tel Aviv's bombardment of Gaza as the conflict threatens to destabilise relations between the United States and Arab leaders, CNN reported.

"The people all around the Middle East, including in Jordan, we are just shocked and disappointed by the world's reaction to this catastrophe that is unfolding. In the last couple of weeks, we have seen a glaring double standard in the world," Queen Rania said on Amanpour & Co, in a video interview from the Jordanian capital, Amman.

the Jordanian capital, Amman.

The Jordanian royal said that when "October 7 happened" the world "immediately and unequivocally" supported Israel and its right to defend itself but in the last couple of weeks, "we're seeing silence in the world."

The 53-year-old queen who has for long been a vocal advocate for the rights of Palestinian people said that it was "for the first time in modern history that there is such human suffering and the world is not even calling for a ceasefire."

Queen Rania said there was a feeling that the Western world is "complicit" in the mass death of civilians.

"Are we being told that it is wrong to kill a family, an entire family, at gunpoint, but it's OK to shell them to death? I mean, there is a glaring double standard here,"

Queen Rania told CNN. "It is just shocking to the Arab world," she said.

Hamas launched a deadly attack on Is-

Hamas launched a deadly attack on Israel on October 7 from the Gaza strip in Palestine, and Israel responded with strikes against Gaza. According to the latest figures shared by the United Nations, the death toll is said to have surpassed 5,000 in Gaza and reached 1,400 in Israel Speaking in the UN Security Council on Tuesday, United States Secretary of State Antony Blinken acknowledged the humanitarian disaster in Gaza, saying that "humanitarian pauses" should be considered, but notably avoided the phrase "ceasefire" the CNN reported

"ceasefire," the CNN reported.

The US, a permanent member of the UNSC had last week vetoed a Brazil-led Security Council proposal for a humanitarian pause in the ongoing Israel-Hamas war to allow for aid into Gaza. It criticized the draft resolution for failing to mention Israel's right to self-defence. The United Kingdom also refused to endorse the resolution. An earlier Russian ceasefire similarly failed, CNN reported. In her interview to CNN, Jordan's Queen said, "As a mom, we've seen Palestinian mothers who have to write the names of their children on their hands - because the chances of them being shelled to death, of their bodies turning into corpses are so high."

"I just want to remind the world that Palestinian mothers love their children just as much as any other mother in the world," Queen Rania told the interviewer.

Meanwhile, in a press conference on the sidelines of Tuesday's United Nations Security Council's open debate on the situation in the Middle East, Jordan's Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Ayman Safadi emphasised that the lives of Palestinians are no less valuable than the lives of Israelis. Safadi called for the urgent delivery of assistance to Gaza Strip and added that the Arab Group rejects the killing of civilians, regardless of their nationality or religion, stressing the importance of stopping the Israeli aggression on the Gaza Strip, according to a report in the Jordan Times. According to the Jordanian publication, Safadi said that the continuation of the war in Gaza will not bring security, peace, or stability, emphasising that the only solution to the conflict in the Middle East is to grant the Palestinian people their rights and establish their independent state on June 4th, 1967

He said that the support for the war Israel is waging gives a "dangerous impression in our region that this war is between the West and the Arabs and Islam," according to Jordan Times.

Safadi warned of the dangers of the current conflict in Gaza spreading to Lebanon and the West Bank.

Jordan had recently cancelled a planned summit in Amman with United States President Joe Biden and Egyptian and Palestinian leaders to discuss Gaza after Biden's visit to Israel last week. Jordan's King Abdullah was supposed to have hosted the four-way summit, which would have on its agenda the need to get humanitarian assistance to Gaza to prevent a humanitarian catastrophe.

According to a report in Al Jazeera, Jordan's foreign minister Safadi said the meeting would be held at a time when the parties could agree to end the "war and the massacres against Palestinians". He had blamed Israel with its military campaign for pushing the region to "the brink of the abyss".

Meanwhile, the Spokesperson for the President of the UN General Assembly has confirmed that the 10th Emergency Special Session on Israel and Palestine will reconvene this Thursday

How broccoli sprouts are useful

o you recall hearing from your parents to "eat your greens, they are good for you"? They certainly had a good idea. Due to their organosulfur compounds, such as glucosinolates and isothiocyanates, which exhibit a wide range of bioactivities including antioxidant activity, cruciferous vegetables like broccoli, one of the most popular vegetables in the United States, are linked to lower risks of diseases like diabetes and cancer. However, few studies have focused on the endogenous content of polysulfide in broccoli sprouts.

A research team led by Assistant Professor Shingo Kasamatsu and Professor Hideshi Ihara of the Graduate School of Science at Osaka Metropolitan University investigated the amount of polysulfides in broccoli sprouts during the process of their germination and growth. Building upon their previous work, the research team demonstrated the abundance of polysulfide molecules in cruciferous vegetables.

The team found that total polysulfide content in broccoli sprouts significantly increased during germination and growth, with an approximately 20-fold increase in polysulfides on the fifth day of germination. Furthermore, they discovered a number of unknown polysulfides with indeterminate molecular structures. These findings suggest that the abundance of polysulfides in broccoli sprouts may contribute to their well-known health-promoting properties. Dr Kasamatsu stated, "The discovery of the significant increase in polysulfide content during the sprouting process from broccoli seeds was completely by chance and very surprising. This finding suggests that polysulfides may play an important role in the process of plant germination and growth. Further investigation of the pharmacological function of these unknown polysulfides could lead to the development of new preventive and therapeutic approaches and medicines for neurodegenerative diseases, stroke, cancer, inflammation.

Proximity to traffic linked to higher dementia risk ccording to an important study undertaken in China and the United Kingdom, living near major highways is associated with an increased risk of dementia and changes in brain structure, owing mostly to traffic-related air pollution.

The research, recently published in Health Data Science, a Science Partner Journal, sheds new light on the public health implications of traffic-related pollution and dementia, a growing concern worldwide. "Prior research has hinted at the neurological risks associated with living near major roads, but the underlying mechanisms remained unclear," said Fanfan Zheng, lead author and professor at the School of Nursing, Peking Union Medical College, Chinese Academy of Medical Sciences. "Our study delves into the relationship between residential proximity to major roads and dementia risk, zeroing in on the role of traffic-related pollutants." Boasting a robust design, the study analyzed data from 460,901 participants over a median follow-up of 12.8 years. Dementia cases were sourced from the UK Biobank and verified, offering a more reliable dataset than patient-reported diagnoses. The study also stratified cases by type of dementia, allowing for a comprehensive analysis.

As an extension of the UK Biobank study, brain

As an extension of the UK Biobank study, brain MRI scans were conducted, revealing changes in brain structures related to Alzheimer's disease at the pre-symptomatic stage. The study also controlled for constitutions and other significant demonstrations.

genetic risks and other significant dementia factors.

"Our findings establish a consistent link between living close to heavy traffic and elevated dementia risk, with traffic-related air pollution, particularly nitrogen dioxide and PM2.5, being the primary drivers," commented Wuxiang Xie, associate professor at Peking University Clinical Research Institute, Peking University First Hospital. "This suggests that mitigating air pollution could be a viable strategy to reduce the dementia risk associated with traffic exposure." Interestingly, the study found no association between long-term traffic noise pollution and dementia, contrary to previous research. Moreover, the study discovered that proximity to traffic was consistently linked to smaller volumes in brain structures associated with Alzheimer's disease.

Alzheimer's disease.

"Future studies should focus on validating the impact of reducing traffic-related pollution on dementia biomarkers and incidence," said Chenglong Li, the study's first author. "Our ultimate goal is to prevent a significant number of dementia cases at the pre-symptomatic stage by eliminating exposure to heavy traffic and its resultant pollutants.

handigarh: Sadhana Nitro Chem Ltd. is thrilled to announce that the company has received its approval from Maharashtra Pollution Control Board (MPCB) for consent to establish the production of Para Aminophenol (pAP). Further, the company is pleased to announce the successful transition to commercial production at its Para Aminophenol (pAP) plant, now operating in a continuous mode. Remarkably, this facility is the world's second plant to manufacture pAP from Nitrobenzene. Producing pAP from Nitrobenzene, as against its manufacturing from Para Nitro Chloro Benzene (PNCB), offers several significant benefits. The PNCB method is marked by substantial effluent production, while the Nitrobenzene approach aligns with green chemistry principles, generating zero effluent. Notably, the PNCB process results in Chloro Aniline (PCA), a substance facing increasing restrictions due to its detrimental effects
