The Municipal Corporation of Delhi is drawing fire over the tragic incident in which two women, aged 25, and a 28-year-old man died after they were trapped in the basement library of Rau's IAS Study Circle in Rajinder Nagar. The library, it has emerged, was functioning in violation of the rules as the civic body had allowed its use only for parking and storage.

About 20 students, it is learnt, were in the library on Saturday evening when heavy rain sent water gushing in The basement had only one entry/exit route. ## LS discusses incident, seeks probe

NEW DELHI: The issue of the tragic death of three students in a flooded basement in Delhi' Old Rajinder Nagar echoed in the Lok Sabha on Monday with members from the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party and the Opposition Congress demanding a probe into the matter.

The matter was also mentioned in the Rajya Sabha as some members gave notices to the presiding officer for taking up a discussion on the incident. During zero hour in Lok Sabha, BJP member Bansuri Swaraj alleged that the tragedy resulted from criminal negligence on the part of the Delhi government. "Those students were in Delhi for the preparation of IAS examinations, but sadly I have to say that due to the criminal negligence of the Delhi government, those students have lost their lives. The cause of the death of these three students is the utter and absolute apathy of the Aam Aadmi Party's ruling dispensation in Delhi," she alleged. Swaraj said the AAP has been in power in Delhi for the last 10 years and it is also ruling the Municipal Corporation of Delhi for the last two years but no up-gradation and desilting of drains has been done.

CBI files chargesheet against Kejriwal in Excise policy case

NEW DELHI, JULY 29

The Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) on Monday filed a chargesheet against Delhi Chief Minister (CM) Arvind Kejriwal and others in Rouse Avenue Court in connection with the excise policy case.

Recently, the Delhi High Court reserved the order on Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal's plea challenging his arrest by the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) in connection with the Excise policy case. The Court also reserved the order on the issue of Kejriwal's plea for interim bail.

During the hearing, CBI lawyer DP Singh submitted that Kejriwal's petitions stated that contrary to the averments of the petitioner, there exists no question of re-appreciation of the material at the stage of the investigation, more specifically since the investigation includes any or all proceedings for the collection of evidence, which is ongoing.

The proceedings at this stage are distinct from the opinion formed by the investigating officer while filing a final report under Section 173 CrPC. There is ample material available on record to justify the necessity of arresting the Petitioner. The Petitioner was also confronted with the said material during his examination.

The CBI further submitted that it is the sole domain of the investigating agency to both interrogate and arrest the accused, after complying with the requirements of the

With the Petitioner remaining evasive during his interrogation on June 25, 2024, the CBI deemed the custodial interrogation of the petition necessary, more specifically since it is more elicitation-oriented and an important right in favour of the investigating agency to unearth the truth.

Section 41-A CrPC read with Section 41-A (3), does not mandate a blanket ban on arrest against whom there is a reasonable suspicion of commission of a cognizable of-fence punishable with imprisonment of up to 7 years. The law on the subject mandates that the investigating officer in such cases should be satisfied with the necessity of arrest under the conditions noted in the sub-clauses (a) to (e) of Section 41 (1) (b) (ii) and should record reasons for the same the CBI told the Delhi High

However, Senior Advocate Abhishek Manu Singhvi appeared for Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal and argued that the most striking feature of this case is that it is

AGENCY NEW DELHI, JULY 29

Leader of Opposition in the Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi on Monday used the 'chakravyuh' metaphor as a leitmotif to say that an atmosphere of fear pervades the country and allege that the budget's sole aim was to strengthen the framework of monopoly capital, political monopoly and the deep state. Participating in the debate in the Lok Sabha on the Union Budget of 2024-25, Gandhi claimed the fear is spreading through a 'chakravyuh' with everybody trapped in it, including BJP MPs, farmers and workers. "Thousands of years ago in Haryana, in Kuvyuh'. A 'chakravyuh' has violence and fear. Abhimanyu was trapped and killed in the 'chakravyuh'," he said. Gandhi's reference was to the Mahabharat legend according to which Abhimanyu was killed in a 'chakravyuh' -- a multi-tiered maze and formation -- in which he was

He said the 'chakravyuh' is also called a 'Padmavyha' which is a multi-tiered formation that looks like a lotus (the BJP symbol). "You the 'chakravyuh'," Gandhi said, asserting that the opposition would break this cycle by carrying out a caste census. "In the 21st century, another 'chakravyuh' has been pre-lotus and the prime minister (Narendra Modi) wears the symbol on his chest. What was done with Abhinmanyu is being done with youth, women, farmers and MS-MEs," he said. The Congress leader said the 'chakravyuh' that has captured India has three forces -- the idea of monopolv capital and concentra-

Editorial Behind the scenes

A door Gopalakrishnan, who turned 83 earlier this month, now reminds one of his unforgettable characters, living in the liminality between the past and the present. Since the demise of his wife, Sunanda, in 2015, the maestro has lived alone in Darsanam, his exquisite wood and granite house amidst a coconut grove on the outskirts of the city of Thiruvananthapuram. A showpiece of traditional Kerala architecture, Darsanam was recreated by Adoor in 1977 using the parts of a two-centuries-old tharavadu (haveli) dismantled by owners to make way for a moviehouse and auctioned as fuel wood and scrap Adoor bought and shifted the entire house, stone by stone and wood by wood, and rebuilt it in its present location even more gracefully. As in the master craftsman's films, in which dwellings are as critical as the characters, light and shade play hide and seek in Darsanam, with the copious Kerala monsoon welcomed into its inner courtyard. One recalls the leitmotifs in his oeuvre: eviction and dislocation, the search for identity

This writer has been coming here for years to meet Adoor and adore his house. Neither age nor loneliness appears to have affected his spirit. A consummate chronicler of the past, he engages with the present with equal ease. His debut film, Swayamvaram (1972), was one of the earliest Indian movies to have synchronised sound recorded with a Nagra, the Swiss-made portable recorder that revolutionised outdoor film-making. His last, Pinneyum (Once Again, 2016), a thriller, was his first film shot digitally. The octogenarian showed me a cute short video he recently shot with his Samsung mobile phone.

Adoor is upbeat that Malayalam cinema has now emerged as the country's biggest grosser, breaking language barriers. "After Pinneyum, I had resolved not to make movies any longer because people were losing interest in cinema. However, Covid and OTT platforms appear to have rekindled interest. I feel like making a Recently, Adoor was seen driving himself — as al-ys — to a cinema hall in the city to watch Ullozhukku (Undercurrent), made by the newcomer, Christo Tomy. "It's one of the best films I have seen. Not many have used the floods more evocatively," said the veteran, who never misses a notable film, even of debutants, and patiently queues up at film festivals. However, his patience runs out when he sees something grossly unfair. Ullozhukku was not selected for the last International Film Festival of India in Goa or the International Film Festival of Kerala. Adoor shot a protest letter to Kerala's culture minister. This action was similar to an incident over half a century ago.

How plastic waste can be converted to electronic devices

he University of Delaware and the Argonne National Laboratory have developed a chemical process that converts Styrofoam into the high-value conducting polymer PEDOT: PSS. The researchers show how improved plastic trash may be successfully integrated into functional electronic devices such as silicon-based hybrid solar cells and organic electrochemical transistors.

The research group of corresponding author Laure Kayser, assistant professor in the Department of Materials Science and Engineering in UD's College of Engineering with a joint appointment in the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry in the College of Arts and Sciences, regularly works with PEDOT:PSS, a polymer that has both electronic and ionic conductivity, and was interested in finding ways to synthesize this mate rial from plastic waste.

Following a meeting with Argonne chemist David Kaphan at an event hosted by UD's research office, the UD and Argonne research teams began evaluating the hypothesis that PEDOT:PSS could be produced by  $sulfonating\ polystyrene, a\ synthetic\ plastic$ found in many types of disposable containers and packaging materials.

Sulfonation is a common chemical reaction where a hydrogen atom is replaced by sulfonic acid: the process is used to create a variety of products such as dyes, drugs and ion exchange resins. These reactions can either be "hard" (with higher conversion efficiency but that require caustic reagents) or "soft" (a less efficient method but one that uses milder materials).

In this paper, the researchers wanted to find something in the middle: "A reagent that is efficient enough to get really high degrees of functionalization but that doesn't mess up your polymer chain," Kayser ex-

The researchers first turned to a method described in a previous study for sulfonating small molecules, one that showed promising results in terms of efficiency and yield, using 1,3-Disulfonic acid imidazolium chloride ([Dsim]Cl). But adding functional groups onto a polymer is more challenging than for a small molecule, the researchers explained, because not only are unwanted byproducts harder to separate, any small errors in the polymer chain can change its overall proper-

To address this challenge, the researchers embarked on many months of trial and error to find the optimal conditions that minimized side reactions, said Kelsev Koutsoukos, a materials science doctoral candidate and second author of this paper.

'We screened different organic solvents, different molar ratios of the sulfonating agent, and evaluated different temperatures and times to see which conditions were the best for achieving high degrees of sulfonation," he said.

The researchers were able to find reaction conditions that resulted in high polymer sulfonation, minimal defects and high efficiency, all while using a mild sulfonating agent. And because the researchers were able to use polystyrene, specifically waste Styrofoam, as a starting material, their method also represents an efficient way to convert plastic waste into PEDOT:PSS. Once the researchers had PEDOT:PSS in hand, they were able to compare how their wastederived polymer performed compared to commercially available PEDOT:PSS.

'In this paper, we looked at two devices -an organic electronic transistor and a solar cell," said Chun-Yuan Lo, a chemistry doctoral candidate and the paper's first author. "The performance of both types of conductive polymers was comparable, and shows that our method is a very eco-friendly approach for converting polystyrene waste into high-value electronic materials.'

Specific analyses conducted at UD included X-ray photoelectron spectroscopy (XPS) at the surface analysis facility, film thickness analysis at the UD Nanofabrication Facility, and solar cell evaluation at the Institute of Energy Conversion. Argonne's advanced spectroscopy equipment, such as carbon NMR, was used for detailed polymer characterization. Additional support was provided by materials science and engineering professor Robert Opila for solar cell analysis and by David C. Martin, the Karl W. and Renate Boer Chaired Professor of Materials Science and Engineering, for the electronic device performance analyses

One unexpected finding related to the chemistry, the researchers added, is the ability to use stoichiometric ratios during the reaction. "Typically, for sulfonation of polystyrene, you have to use an excess of really harsh reagents. Here, being able to use a stoichiometric ratio means that we can minimize the amount of waste being generated, Koutsoukos said. This finding is something the Kayser group will be looking into further as a way to "fine-tune" the degree of sulfonation. So far, they've found that by varying the ratio of starting materials, they can change the degree of sulfonation on the polymer

Woman commits suicide over inflated electricity bill in Pakistan

65-year-old woman, Razia Bibi suffering from a hernia, committed suicide after using her treatment money to pay an unexpected electricity bill, ARY News reported.

She had carefully set aside funds for her treatment, but the sudden bill left her with no other option, leading to a tragic sequence of events. She had diligently saved money for her hernia operation. However, when Pakistani currency (PKR) 10,000, she had no choice but to use her medical savings to settle the payment, as per ARY News

Following this, the son of Razia Bibi stated that his mother had gone out to buy medicine but was deeply distressed over the financial setback, overcome by despair, she jumped into a nearby drain, as per the police officials. "My mother was a hernia patient and had saved money for her operation, but after receiving the electric bill of Rs 10,000, she paid it with the money saved for her surgery and later committed suicide." Usman said. Razia Bibi's daughter rushed to save her mother but was unsuccessful, while the local authorities are currently conducting a search operation to recover the woman's body. Footage of the incident leading up to the tragedy has emerged. Meanwhile, The Gujranwala Police have initiated an investigation into the incident.

Recently, Pakistan's right-wing party Jamaat-i-Islami (JI) Emir Hafiz Naeemur Rehman issued a stern warning to the government, threatening to expand their ongoing sit-in protest in Rawalpindi to other arcreased electricity bills and taxes are not met, as reported by Dawn. According to reports, the sit-in, which is currently taking place at Liaquat Bagh, could see further escalation if the government does not respond to the demands. The news report quoted Rehman saying, "If the government is thinking that the sit-in would continue on Murree Road only, it is wishful thinking. If they do not reduce electricity bills in a genuine manner, do not address the matter of IPPs (independent power producers), and do not revoke the [tax] slab on the salaried class, then this sit-in would not remain limited to here; it would spread further to the entire

Paris Olympics: Dutch player convicted of rape booed amid uproar over participation

teven van de Velde, the Dutch beach volleyball player who was convicted of raping a child a decade ago, was roundly booed by the crowd during the Netherlands' first match at the Paris Olympics, CNN reported.

Footage posted on social media showed jeers and boos ringing out, as van de Velde and his partner Matthew Immers walked out into the arena at the foot of the Eiffel Tower.

Eventually, the duo was defeated by the Italian duo of Alex Ranghieri and Adrian Carambu-

Van de Velde's participation at these Olympic Games has caused much uproar given that he was sentenced to four years in prison for raping a 12-year-old girl in 2014, CNN reported, citing British media. He was released in 2017 and is now 29 years old.

Despite the torrent of criticism directed towards the Dutch National Olympic Committee for selecting him, the International Olympic Committee defended the decision as "correct," saying that van de Velde has undergone "a great deal of rehabilitation."

Immers defended his teammate from criticism, telling reporters, "What's in the past is in the past. He had his punishment and now he is really kind. For me, it is an example that (he) grew and learned a lot from it."

Ju'Riese Colon, CEO for the US Centre for SafeSport, said in June that the organisation was "deeply concerned that anyone convicted of sexually assaulting a minor could participate in the 2024 Olympic Games.""With teams from around the world about to convene in Paris, many of which include minor athletes, this sends a dangerous message that medals and money mean more than their safety. Participation in sport is a privilege, not a right," she added.

French Sports Minister Amelie Oudea-Castera said she is "shocked" at Van de Velde's par-

"As a woman, I am shocked to imagine that someone that has raped a little girl is at the Olympics...What is important to keep in mind is that the decision to select an athlete is taken by the NOC, it's not at all the responsibility of the French state," CNN quoted her as saying.

Pb Alco-Bev Industry crippled by state excise department's draconian circular mandate from the Punjab Excise Department has sent shockwaves through the alco-bev industry, jeopardizing the livelihoods of thousands and threatening to derail the state's ambitious revenue targets. The circular, issued from Ludhiana in June 2024, restricts retailers and retail groups to purchasing a mere 1,000 cases of Indian Manufactured Foreign Liquor (IMFL) per month. Any additional purchases now require a permit based on a utilization report, effectively slashing the market supply from 1 million cases per month to a meager 250,000 cases. This drastic measure is devastating for both large and small-scale spirits companies in Puniab. With approximately 230 retail groups operating around 6.500 stores, the state's new excise policy for FY25 aims to generate Rs 10.000 crore from liquor sales, slightly up from the Rs 8,850 crore generated the previous year. However, this new circular threatens to derail these revenue targets and devastate the local liquor industry.

A spokesperson from the

the industry's concern: "Our member companies have reported a significant decline in sales of IMFL since the circular was issued. This mandate to regulate permits may lead to near decimation of the mid-segment and smaller players in Puniab, a critical market for the industry The local impact is severe, with whisky and vodka sales suffering significantly. This situation also undermines the efforts of new entrants to establish their presence in the market" Furthermore, as liquor sales in the state decline by more than 50%, liquor manufacturing units will be running under capacity, adversely affecting daily wage laborers and increasing unemployment. The agriculture sector will also feel the impact significantly. In northern markets, the April-July period sees beer contributing more than 50% of liquor sales. After July retailers will face even greater challenges in meeting consumer demand and covering

An anonymous senior executive from a major alcohol business in India issued a stark warning about the unintended consequences of the circular. "By slashing

the circular is paving the way for rampant black marketing. Retailers, having paid hefty fees for licenses, may turn to selling local whisky from unauthorized distilleries bypassing duties altogether. This will lead to a surge in illicit liquor, hitting organized players hard and jeopardizing consumer safety," he cautioned.

As the Punjab Excise has drastically reduced the issuance of retail permits to almost 30%-40%, retailers, to protect their business interests and recover their shop license fees, have been forced to increase the retail sales price of liquor. Ultimately, it is the consumer who will suffer from these increased prices.

The state government's high-handed approach threatens to stifle the growth of the alco-bev industry in Punjab, pushing many legitimate businesses to the brink of collapse. As the industry reels under these oppressive restrictions, the Punjab Excise Department needs to reconsider and revoke this draconian circular to protect the livelihoods of thousands and ensure the continued growth and safety of the alco-bev market in Punjab.

Watermelon-Sized Uterine Tumor Weighing 2.2 Kgs Successfully Removed from 49-Year-Old Woman via Robot-Aided Surgery at Fortis Noida identify the anatomical structures tissues. The large mass of tumour

Fortis Hospital, Noida successfully operated and removed a watermelon sized noncancerous tumor weighing 2.2 kgs from the uterus of a 49-year-old woman via Robot-aided surgery. The team of doctors led by Dr Anjana Singh, Director & HOD, Obstetrics and Gynaecology, Fortis Hospital, Noida conducted the complex surgery, which lasted for 3 hours. The patient was discharged in stable condition two days later.

Upon admission at Fortis Noida the patient complained of severe pain during her menstruation cycle, along with irregular and heavy bleeding for almost 2 years An ultrasound revealed a large fibroid (tumour) measuring 17-18 cms in size along with other fibroids of 7-8 cm. Such fibroids typically form when the body secretes excessive estrogen which causes the growth of fibroid had occupied the entire abdominal area, thus making it extremely difficult to operate. Additionally, the patient had undergone two prior C-sections, and her scars were vertical. In such cases, there is always a risk of injury to the vital organs during dissection of the adhesions. Hence, Robot-assisted surgery was adopted to better and minimize the risk of unintended damage to the internal organs. Giving details of the case, Dr Anjana Singh, Director & HOD, Obstetrics and Gynaecology, Fortis Hospital, Noida said, "The patient had travelled from Aligarh, as there she was advised to undergo traditional open surgery by multiple gynaecologists, which the patient did not want to opt for. That's when she came to Fortis. In this case, the tumour had grown to the sizeof a watermelon. We had to be extremely careful while operating to save the vital organs, and that's where robot-assisted surgery provided enhanced precision. The surgery involved very little requirement for blood transfusion, owing to high precision. The most challenging part of this surgery was to retrieve such heavy tumour.
