He further said that the relations between India and Germany are not "transactional" in nature but rather "transformational"

During the 7th Inter-Governmental Consultations, PM Modi emphasized the transformational relationship, focusing on cooperation in defence, technology, and sustainable development.

The world is going through an era of tensions, conflicts and uncertainty. In the Indo-Pacific Region, there are serious concerns regarding the rule of law and reedom of navigation," PM Modi said during his address. 'In a time like this, a strategic partnership between India and Germany has emerged as a strong anchor. This is not transactional relations, this is a transformational partnership of two capable and empowered democracies," the Prime Minister said.

Stock Markets dip continues; Sensex tanks by 662 points

AGENCY MUMBAI, OCT 25

Domestic stock markets closed in the negative territory for the fourth consecutive day, with both benchmark indices registering significant losses.

The Sensex plunged by 662.81 points, ending the day at 79,402.29, while the Nifty fell 218.60 points to close at 24,180.80. Among Nifty-listed companies, only 12 stocks advanced, whereas 38 stocks declined, reflecting a broad-based sell-off across sectors.

Leading the list of Nifty gainers were ITC, Axis Bank, Bharat Electronics Limited (BEL), Britannia, and Hindustan Unilever. Conversely, the top losers included IndusInd Bank Adani Enterprises, Bharat Petro-leum Corporation Limited (BPCL), Shriram Finance, and Coal India, which faced significant downward

According to VLA Ambala, Co-Founder of Stock Market Today, several factors contributed to the day's bearish performance.

Ambala said, "The depreciation of the Indian rupee against the dollar is affecting India's purchasing power and global position. In addition, the lukewarm Q2 results did not meet the expected GDP growth target, leaving investors cautious."

She added, "The FIIs are also on an aggressive selling spree and have offloaded over Rs 1 lakh crore in 30 days. However, DIIs have compensated nearly 94% of this outflow, buying Rs 92,931.54 crore in equity in October. This activity has led to a 7 % decline in Nifty50, and the downturn is likely to continue. Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) have played a key role in the recent market volatility, with an aggressive selling spree over the past

For mid-term investors, Ambala recommended a cautious approach. "Consider buying in parts near the 50-week EMA with a significant dip," she suggested. as the market braces for further fluctuations in the coming sessions.

"It's unfortunate that those who contributed to our independence have now election," he added. He criticized the Badal family's previous alliances and their treatment of Sikh institutions, claiming, "During their rule, they undermined Sikh organizations, treating them as mere political tools." He said that Badal Dal has deserted Punjab, Sikhs and their matters a long time ago.

Kang also called out Raja Warring for his recent comments, which he believes reflect an ongoing anti-Sikh sentiment. "Warring's remarks prove that he, along with the Congress, has always been disrespectful towards Sikh institutions,' Kang stated. "The Sikh people will no longer support those who betray their trust. The Badal family has become synonymous with betrayal," he said

Captain's mandi visit is just "drama": Harpal Cheema

CHANDIGARH: Reacting to Captain Amarinder Singh's visit to Khanna grain market, senior leader of the Aam Aadmi Party and Punjab Finance Minister Harpal Singh Cheema said that Captain

Amarinder Singh often meets with Home Minister Amit Shah and Prime Minister Narendra Modi. but why has he never raised the issues of Punjab's farmers and commission agents in front of them?

Cheema stated that Captain's political career has ended. Since the public has rejected him, he is now pretending to show sympathy for farmers by visiting the mandis. He mentioned that the people of Punjab know that the entire problem has been created by the central government. The central government has not lifted rice from warehouses on time and has not listened to the concerns of the millers and commission agents, causing distress to farmers and arhtiyas in Punjab.

Captain Amarinder Singh's party (BJP) hates Punjab. They hate the farmers and commission agents of Punjab, and that is why they are deliberately harassing them. He added that Captain knows that the central government has withheld thousands of crores from various funds meant for Punjab. The central gov ernment has been holding back RDP, MDF, and NHM funds for years, but Captain has never raised these issues before the cen ter. Moreover, when the Modi government introduced the three controversial farm laws, Captain Amarinder Singh was supporting the center. At that time, the Aam Aadmi Party was in opposition, and we repeatedly stated that Captain was acting more as an agent of the BJP than as a Chief Minister of Punjab.

Shrimad Bhagwat Mahapuran is living form of God: Shyam Sundar

RAHUL KOHLI YAMUNANAGAR, OCT 25

During the Shrimad Bhagwat Katha organized at Bhagwan Parshuram Bhawan Govindpuri, Thakur Shyam Sundar Maharaj, who came from Katha Vyas Barsana, said that virtue that was obtained after thousands of years of penance in Treta, Dwapar, Satyayug, same virtue can be obtained in Kalyug by merely taking name of God. This is only specialty of Kalyug that salvation is easy in this era, that is why it is said that Kalyug is based only on name. Same thing was said to God in Kalyug too, when he did not get a good place in this era, he said that God, along with demerits, I also have some virtues, looking at those virtues, give me a good place where I can live. Looking at virtues of Kalyug, God gave him a place to live in gold. Earlier, Kalyug was given a place to live in a place where Vaishyas go, where gambling is played or where violence takes place. Gold which is earned by hard work and sweat or gifted by someone, God resides in it, but gold which is earned through black money earned through corruption, Kaliyug resides in it. Katha Vyas Thakur Shyam Sundar Ji Maharaj said that there is a lot of difference between Bhagwat Katha and Bhagwat Geeta, but some people do not understand this difference and consider Bhagwat and Bhagwat Geeta to be same. He told that Shrimad Bhagwat Geeta is a message given to people at battlefield by making Shri Krishna an excuse, which came out of mouth of God. This is a song sung by God, while Shrimad Bhagwat Mahapuran has vision of various leelas of Lord Shri Krishna. He told that Bhagwat Mahapuran is not just a book but is real form of God.

Feminine spaces

women. But what about the inclusion of women. But what about the inclusion of men in some public spaces? The stage, for example, for a public meeting. The dignitaries, mostly male, are seated on the stage, their expressions slightly ominous, or maybe they are just bored, when the MC's voice enthusiastically announces a diversion, a tradition that has survived all cultural and socio-economic changes: the presentation of the pushpa-stabak, the flower bouquet. (In another time-honoured tradition, the flowers are covered with a plastic sheet and so tightly bound that they look like someone who is being throttled.)

The procession that pours in on the stage, brandishing the bouquets like torches, is composed entirely of the female gender. This is true of almost all platforms, from the para Puja inauguration to academic seminars. The girls/women hand over the bouquets to the dignitaries quickly so that the real business of the day can begin; and the ceremony clearly defines the role of women as just decoration. Not once in my entire life have I seen men presenting pushpa-stabaks.

This should change. I want to see women delivering speeches and men bouquets.

Another place where men are required more is the school/class WhatsApp group. Some schools may be exceptions, but in most schools the groups have very few fathers, if at all. This practice defines another gender role: that whatever else mothers may do or be interested in, managing the children's school life is solely their responsibility. I long to hear fathers pop the question, such as "Do u know of any good psychology teacher?", or a more anxious one, such as "Has the teacher shared the Zoom link for the 9.30 class?", or a desperate one, such as "Moms, can anyone please send an extra Deccan Plateau map? Abhya can't find hers:(."

Those who do this work know what it takes and they are called 'Moms'. When will we hear a strident man's voice demanding "Dads, what should I send for class canteen?" That sounds ridiculous, as ridiculous as it would be in an earlier decade if a girl's party having come to examine a potential groom had asked him to sing. But is it really ridiculous? What if all mothers went on a strike, taking their cue from Aristophanes's Lysistrata, and taking off from the WhatsApp situation? Yet another area of concern is apparel ads. Here the representation of men is not so much of a problem as the difference in the behaviour of men and women. The women, especially in wedding or traditional wear ads, are prone to be found in an idyllic setting: a magnificent mahal or a gentle forest gleaming in the sun.

with the presidential elections merely two weeks away, a new national survey from
The Wall Street Journal has revealed that US Vice President Kamala Harris and former US President Donald Trump remain effectively tied with 12 days until Election Day, Politico reported.

Notably, elections in the US are slated to be held on November 5. The poll shows Trump with 47 per cent to 45 per cent edge over Kamala Harris, an advantage that comes within the survey's margin of error of plus or minus 2.5 percentage points.

In the paper's iteration of the poll conducted in August, Harris had a 2 point advantage, which was within the margin of error, according to Politico report.

The presidential nominees of Republican party and Democratic party are not only neck and neck nationally. But, also in the swing states that will ultimately decide the winner of the Electoral College.

A poll conducted by Washington Post of those states released on Monday revealed Trump and Harris each with narrow leads within margin of error, Politico reported.

The poll conducted by The Wall Street Journal surveyed 1,500 registered voters between October 19-22. According to the poll, voters are considering Trump more favourable than Harris. Trump's favorability of 48 per cent is his highest yet in the poll conducted by The Wall Street Journal, the report said.

Kamala Harris sits at 45 per cent, seeing a drop from 49 per cent in August. The two presidential candidates still have favorability below 50 per cent. Vice Presidential nominees - Tim Walz and JD Vance have also shown a similar trend, Politico reported. JD Vance's favorability has witnessed a rise from 40 per cent to 45 per cent while Minnesota Governor Tim Walz has seen a slight drop, from 46 percent in August to 44 percent in October. On Sunday, Donald Trump made an unusual stop at Philadelphia's McDonald's franchise while Vice President and Democratic presidential candidate Kamala Harris participated in worship services in Atlanta to garner support, Al Jazeera reported.

Trump wearing an apron over his shirt and tie made fries and interacted with the staff of McDonald's."It requires great expertise, actually, to do it right and to do it fast," Trump said."I like this job," he added.

Trump's visit to McDonald's came as a counter to Harris' statement of working at fast-food chain during her time in college, Al Jazeera reported. On the other hand, Harris participated in two worship services on her 60th birthday in Atlanta.

During her visit to Divine Faith Ministries International in Jonesboro in Georgia, famous musician Stevie Wonder performed, singing his hit Higher Ground and a version of Bob Marley's Redemption Song.

He also sang Happy Birthday to Harris, Al Jazeera reported. Addressing public in Georgia, Harris said, "At this point across our nation, what we do see are some trying to deepen division among us, spread hate, sow fear and cause chaos."

"At this moment, our country is at a crossroads and where we go is up to us," she added.

WHO congratulates South East Asia for its polio eradication achievements

Saima Wazed, World Health Organisation's (WHO) Regional Director for South-East Asia, on Thursday congratulated the region for achieving and maintaining a decade of polio-free status on World Polio Day celebrated today.

"The WHO South-East Asia Region was certified free of wild polioviruses on 27 March 2014. The last case of wild poliovirus in the region was reported in January 2011, and since then, no new cases of wild poliovirus have been reported from any country of this region. This remarkable milestone is a testament to the unwavering political commitment, relentless efforts of the health workers, and the collaborative spirit of partners, donors, civil societies, and all stakeholders that have driven this success. This demonstrates the commendable dedication and commitment to public health and citizens' well-being of all the countries of our region", she said.

In her speech she urged SE Asian nations to remain vigilant as polio has not been eradicated completely from the world. "The international spread of poliovirus remains a public health emergency of international concern. Therefore, it is imperative that we continue to uphold and strengthen polio essential functions. This includes maintaining high immunization coverage, robust surveillance systems, and rapid response mechanisms to any potential outbreaks. It is equally important to ensure containment of polio virus materials, and containment contingency plan according to global guidelines", she highlighted.

Highlighting the achievements of South East Asia, she noted, "Our region continues to remain on track with all the key strategies for polio eradication.

Soul replaces old bodies rishna says that Atma neither kills nor is killed and only the ignorant think otherwise (2.19, 2.20). It is unborn, eternal, changeless and ancient. He further says that ments to wear new ones.

In a scientific context this is well explained by the law of conservation of energy and the principle of inter-convertibility of mass and energy.

like we discard worn out gar-

If Atma is equated with energy, Lord Krishna's words become crystal clear. The law of conservation of energy says that energy can never be destroyed, but can only be converted from one form to another. For example, thermal power stations convert thermal energy into electricity. A bulb converts electricity into light. So, it is just conversion and there is no destruction. A bulb has a limited lifespan. When it gets fused, it is replaced by a new bulb, but electricity still remains. This is similar to the way in which we discard worn out clothes for new ones. For us death is an inference, not an experience. Our understanding is that all of us will die one day and we infer this when we see others die. To us, death means bodies getting immobilized and senses ceasing to function.

There is no way for us to know about our own physical death or to experience it, except for what we infer i.e. death is a certainty for us all.

Our lives revolve around death and the fears associated with it. Lord Krishna says everything else is possible, but death isn't a possibility, it is just an illusion. When clothes are worn out, they can no longer protect us from the elements and we replace them with new ones. Similarly, when our physical body is unable to perform its duties, it is replaced.

Study reveals how reminders can eliminate age-related memory loss recent study from UT Arlington showed that setting reminders can reverse some age-related memory deficits. The findings represent a significant breakthrough in tackling the cognitive issues that older persons confront, particularly in the context of prospective memory, which is the ability to remember to complete an intended activity at the appropriate time, such as taking medication or attending appointments.

"Prospective memory is essential for daily living and maintaining independence, especially as people age," said Hunter Ball, associate professor of psychology at UTA and lead author of the study. "Failing to remember these forward-looking tasks can lead to serious consequences, and previous research has shown that prospective memory tends to decline with age."

Conducted with psychologists at UTA and Arizona State University, the study involved two experiments that tested prospective memory performance in younger and older adults under varying conditions with or without the aid of reminders. Participants were asked to remember specific tasks while completing ongoing activities, and their performance was measured in both high-load (more items to remember) and low-load conditions (fewer items to remember).

Conducted with psychologists at UTA and Arizona State University, the study involved two experiments that tested prospective memory performance in younger and older adults under varying conditions with or without the aid of reminders. Participants were asked to remember specific tasks while completing ongoing activities.

In the first experiment, participants were given specific tasks to remember, such as responding to certain words, and some were provided with reminders displayed on-screen. The results showed no significant age-related decline in prospective memory without reminders under low load, but under high load, both younger and older adults benefitted equally from using reminders. This suggests that reminders can help reduce cognitive strain by making memory retrieval less reliant on internal memory processes.

The second experiment introduced more complex, nonspecific tasks that required participants to recognize categories, such as animals or fruits, rather than specific words. Older adults experienced more difficulties in remembering these nonspecific tasks under high memory load with out reminders, but these age-related performance gaps were eliminated entirely when reminders were available. This finding was critical as it highlight ed the potential for reminders to counteract the deficits associated with more cognitively demanding tasks that typically strain older adults' memo-

Ball and his colleagues suggest that the effectiveness of reminders for older adults stems from their increased tendency to check reminders more frequently when faced with high cognitive demands.

This compensatory behavior likely helps older adults manage tasks that would otherwise be too taxing on their internal memory resources.

The study's implications extend beyond the laboratory, as prospective memory is a crucial cognitive function in real-life settings. As the population ages, finding practical solutions to memory problems is becoming increasingly important. The authors highlight that digital tools like smartphone apps, personal assistants like Amazon Alexa, or even simple reminder notes can serve as valuable aids for older adults in managing their daily tasks effectively and maintaining their independence.

"This new study demonstrates that cognitive offloading, specifically using reminders like cell phone calendars, can effectively mitigate these declines," said Ball. "While our study was conducted in a controlled setting, these findings can easily be applied in real-world environments as a way to provide easy and effective way to alleviate the burden of prospective memory challenges in older adults."

sentence in Sampla murder case SHIV KUMAR SHARMA ROHTAK, OCT 25

A Division Bench of Puniab and Harvana High Court have set aside the judgment of conviction and order of sentence passed by Additional Session Judge Rohtak on 15, 16th July 2011. The convict Naveen has filed appeal before the Hon'ble HC against the above conviction order on various grounds contending that the complainant PW1 Satpal was not an eve witness to the occurrence. Arguing on behalf of the Appellant the learned counsel Mr. Priyavrat Parashar, Advocate said that this evidence would amount to hearsay or based on suspicion. The last seen evidence of Dharampal

(PW2) could not be believed because he was a close relative of PW3-Satbir. He further argued that the case of prosecution was doubtful. The FIR was registered on 1st September 2008 at 10.00 PM. Where as per the inquest report, the body was discovered on 2nd September. However, as per the arrest memo and the cross examination of PW12- Shamsher Singh, the appellant was arrested at 3.30 PM. Advocate Priyavrat argued that this discrepancy is fatal to the prosecution case inasmuch as it is the case of the prosecution that the body was recovered pursuant to the arrest and disclosure statement of the appel lant. He further argued that once the arrest of the appellant itself was shown at 3.30 PM, the question of the discovery of the dead body at 02.30 PM on the same day does not arise.
